TODAY'S VERSE

Jeremiah 33:3 Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not.

FACES OF HAMILTON COUNTY
People who call our community their own.

What makes Santa Claus smile? "Just being with the kids," said Robert Shuck, who was found during a previous year listening to Christmas wishes from all ages of visitors at the Santa House on the Courthouse Square in downtown Noblesville. Shuck, a now 75-year-old Westfield resident, has been playing Santa for more than 10 years. Today's feature is a look back at one of The Times' previous Faces of Hamilton County. He owns his own Santa suit, hat and boots. He has perfected a jolly laugh, and he dons a real white beard that he has been growing for years. He played Santa the last three years on the Courthouse Square. His wife, Judith, played Mrs. Claus. His wife is a fifth-generation Westfield resident. He was born in Greensboro, N.C., then lived in Mays, Kennard, Westfield and Carmel, where his dad coached athletics, and then Evansville, where his dad was in the insurance business, before living 38 years in Alabama, where he graduated high school. He is a retired band director of 40 years and helps with the Westfield High School band. He reunited with Mrs. Claus, his "first-grade sweetheart," in 1999 and got married and moved back to Westfield. Kids can visit the Santa House on the Square before Santa returns to the North Pole, from noon to 5 p.m. today, Christmas Eve.

And Another Thing...

Of course most city and county offices are closed today and Saturday for the Christmas holiday. All Indiana BMW offices will also be closed the same days. And likewise for The Times as we hope our friends and families all enjoy a wonderful Christmas!

Feeling down because Noblesville's annual Christmas parade was canceled this year due to the pandemic?

Don't worry, I have a solution. I've borrowed a time machine so we can go back to December 1, 1962 to see Noblesville's very first Christmas parade.

I got the contraption from this

To all our wonderful customers, By now you are used to your favorite Hamilton County daily doing things a little bit differently.

It's been a long (and short) 17 years since the little company that could was founded. Of course we never would have survived any of those 17 years if not for you. For that, and so much more, you have our eternal thanks!

So today, as so much of the world gets set to celebrate one of the biggest holidays, we again bring you a little something different. On this page and inside this edition you will hear from some of our owners, some of our employees and a lot of the columnists and writers you love. This is a special treat for me, because I get to tell you how special and important all of these people are, not just to me, but to our entire company. I hope you enjoy today's special Christmas message. More than anything though, all of us at the little paper that could want to say thank you for reading, subscribing and advertising! We appreciate all of you!

Merry Christmas to all of our Times newspaper readers.

As a journalist, I've been writing about Noblesville for 35 years. And some of the same people who were reading my first feature stories in 1986 in the Noblesville Daily Ledger are still reading my newspaper columns in 2021 in The Times.

And I thank you. Thank you to all of my faithful readers. I appreciate you reading my columns and my stories and enjoying my photos.

Over the past 35 years, I've written thousands of stories and taken thousands of photos about people, places and things in and around Noblesville.

Thank you to my readers who send story ideas and

In this age of newspapers, I've learned that while we may not always have a newspaper that we can hold in our hands, we will continue to find new and better ways to share the news in our communities so that readers, wherever they are, on laptops, iPads or cell phones, can still feel connected to their communities.

I appreciate you reading my work. Merry Christmas! And Happy New Year!

From Jeff . . .

As I ready for my 9th year as the Superintendent of Hamilton Heights School Corporation, I am as excited to serve in this role today as I was when I was first hired in January of 2014. Each year only seems to get better. For this, I credit, in part, our amazing village.

It really does take a village to raise a child and I can't think of a better place to call home and raise a family than in Hamilton County. It is where I was raised, my children were raised, and in my not so humble opinion, home to six of the best public school districts in the state, including Hamilton Heights.

Here our village has long shown its support in many ways and in many forms to Heights' commitment to creating a positive culture and enriching learning environment. Our community and district families are aligned in the belief that working together helps our students thrive and become the best version of themselves. Through active engagement and strong public-private partnerships, our students are provided with additional opportunities that have made Heights an education destination of choice for families, educators, and support staff.

Our community's investment in our schools helps spark innovation, opportunity, vitality, and creative solutions that strengthen our school and surrounding communities for future generations. We take immense pride in highlighting the accomplishments and successes of our students and staff, learning initiatives, amazing facilities, and programs. I see the impactful influence of a village working together in our halls and classrooms, on our fields and courts, and throughout the community. Our students' journey is one that is nurtured and shared by all, and I thank you for that gift.

I encourage you to take a moment during this break to go to our website at www.hhschuski.org to revisit our monthly video updates beginning with #69 in July, and read our bimonthly messages beginning in August to share in and celebrate some of our accomplishments and successes from the first part of this school year. You will see what is possible and the positive outcomes that result thanks to the involvement of our school board, staff, students, parents, and community.

We really do have many reasons for celebrating and appreciating the solid and supportive anchor that is our family and community. It is truly something special. In the spirit of the season, let's continue to share of ourselves and in our village, by doing the best we can, with a little grace today and every day.

Thank you for supporting our children, teachers, and staff and helping to make Hamilton Heights an amazing place to teach, learn, and belong. From our family to yours, Merry Christmas! #WeAreHuskies

Being an auto enthusiast, many of my fondest Christmas memories center around four-wheeled experiences – usually involving one of my grandparents. Some of my fondest were driving my grandma to Christmas Eve services in her Mercedes or riding with my grandpa to pick up presents in his 1980s pickup. It wasn't until I was a little older that I really appreciated the time spent with loved ones.

During much of the 1990s, I was a student at General Motors Institute in Flint, Mich. There were long semesters, taking massive credits under constant stress. Beyond coursework, I was auto editor for the school newspaper. I remember one semester, after finals, standing in the snow taking a long sigh that it was finally over. I could not wait to pack up my little Geo Spectrum and drive to my grandmother's in Marion.

Later that evening, my grandmother and I would drive through the Walkway of Lights along the Mississinewa River in Marion. We'd have a quick dinner along the way and enjoy hot chocolate in Matter Park. Nothing made me happier than spending that time with her. The next day, my parents and extended family would arrive for the holiday, but that night was just between my grandmother, myself, and her glitzen' Benz.

My grandmother passed in 2011, but she gave me her Mercedes C220 when she quit driving a few years before. I now have a seven-year-old daughter who never met her great-grandmother, but every year we back the Mercedes out of the garage, flip in a tape of Christmas songs, and take our own tour of lights. We drive down Meridian, past mansions aglow, and around Monument Circle downtown, then stop at a coffee shop to grab hot chocolates. I only wish our grandmother was with us.

I remember another Christmas Eve when it snowed so hard we couldn't make it ten miles to my grandparents' for dinner and presents. Like a modern-day Rudolf, my uncle blasted through blowing snow in his four-wheel-drive Chevy pickup, piled us all in the front seat, and delivered my family to the festivities. As we plowed up the drifting driveway, my grandfather stood next to his spruce tree with antique colored lights smiling ear-to-ear. We made it. Christmas was saved.

I wonder what my daughter will remember. Will it be long hours in the back of our new Subaru Outback Wilderness through snow and fast highways to visit relatives in Kokomo and Dallas, Texas? Or, maybe riding with her grandpa in his pickup truck to choose a Christmas tree or load up some firewood? Whatever it is, I hope her holiday memories are as fond as mine.

And, I hope you'll take some time this holiday season to make your own memories with family and friends. Go for the drive. Stream some Christmas songs. Enjoy all the lights. Grab a hot chocolate. It is the most magical time of the year, so send up a toast to Santa and enjoy it! Storm Forward!

Some forward my column to friends around the country, but my favorite compliment is when I am told the column ended up behind a magnet on the fridge door. I walk around my neighborhood later in the evening these days, mostly so I can see the lights.

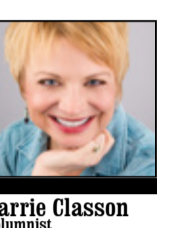

There are some impressive houses just a mile or so away, and I walk down the sidewalks and see what has appeared on the lawns and in the windows now, right before Christmas.

Some of the houses clearly had outside assistance. There are lights hung in places that only a cherry picker could reach. One house had four such enormous trees in a row, all in uniform white lights, until the top half of one of them went out (which completely spoiled the look) and all four trees have been dark ever since.

I see florist vans parked outside some houses as elaborate arrangements of pine and birch and colored berries are delivered. The result is splendid, if a little predictable. Some houses have an electric candle in every window—and there are a lot of windows. Some have put a lit Christmas tree in the attic window. One house has matching trees shining out of two windows on the second floor, decorated in brilliant red lights. It's a stunning sight.

But the thing that stopped me in my tracks the other night was a single small tree and a woman stringing lights just before Christmas.

It was dark, and I was across the street. The house was large and old and on the porch was a skinny tree—a live Christmas tree—and there was a woman stringing lights around it. The woman was also old. Her movements were slow, and I could see she was a little bent over. But she was determined to decorate this little tree, standing to the side of her front door, and I watched as the lit bulbs were wound with infinite care around the narrow tree frame.

Carrie Classon
Columnist
Carrie Classon
is a freelance writer and author and lives in New Mexico. Her columns appear here weekly.

Progress was slow. But it was a warm night and the action, for some reason, transfixed me. The woman had large golden bulbs wound around the center of the tree from the bottom to the top, and winding smaller golden lights around the exterior of the branches. The lights were nested densely together, and it looked as if the tree was ablaze with warm yellow light. It was the only decoration in the front of her big house, and I could tell she was determined to get it exactly right. And, by the end, it was. Her little tree, covered in golden lights of different sizes, was this small, perfect thing, blazing from her porch, visible up and down the street.

Something about that tree made my heart hurt.

I wanted to tell that woman how much at least one passer-by appreciated her small, bright tree, and how I knew how long and hard she'd worked to get it right. I wanted to tell her that, while the season is short, I will enjoy her tree every time I walk by it, and I will remember it long after it is taken down.

But it was more than that.

I wanted to be like that woman who did this one beautiful thing so well. I wanted to be like her tree that shone so brightly from the porch, creating a sort of magic that stopped me on the sidewalk. I wanted to lift someone's spirits in the way that tree lifted mine and be a reminder of the small, bright things that fill our lives if we only stop long enough to enjoy them.

But the best I can do is to tell you about it. And so I have.

'Twas the night before Christmas, and I was a grouse

The question occurring: Am I man or a mouse?

You see I'd forgotten, my deadline was due

To my office I sprinted, taking stair-steps by two

Away to my keyboard I ran with a flash

To find that my hard drive had eaten my cache

So I took out my iPhone, and turned on a light;

Then it struck me quite sudden, I had nothing to write

My brain I was wracking, yet nothing bright came

I had written all year, so the subjects I named:

I wrote of History and Jump Ropes and COVID, the bane My Toothache, McDonald's, and COVID again On Vaccines, on Diets, on Computers, and Ants On Luggage, on Scout Camp, and Middle School Bands Insurrections, Supply Chains, Garage Builds and more On Night Shifts and Socks and Pronouns times four On Rope Climbs and Mask blame, Afghanistan shame On my good friend, named Amber, fighting cancer again On Lying, On Mulch, and even on Guns You're eating alone if a girl calls you 'Hon On fun stuff and serious, the departure of Bert; The passing of Brave Sweetie, the loss I still hurt. I must stop rehashing the work I amassed, 'cause my deadline is nearing; Oh no! It went past. I tho't of Maw in her kerchief, and I in my cap But realized quickly that was nothing but disappointing Then out on my lawn, not an elf or reindeer, but a Peacock named 'Ed' was inclined to appear And that's when it struck me, what needed expressed to all my dear readers, you are surely the best. Christmas has always been my favorite time of year, and thanks to the readers of The Paper and The Times,

I'm celebrating my third holiday season writing a sports column for you.

You have given me a gift that keeps on giving. Just a few months after leaving the Lafayette Journal & Courier, I was looking for an outlet to write about Purdue and college / high school sports. Luckily for me, a fellow Journal & Courier alumnus was looking to broaden The Paper's sports report.

A couple of meetings with Tim Timmons and not only was I contracted to write a weekly column, I also had the pleasure of covering high school football, as well as boys and girls basketball.

Thanks to our readers, I regained my passion for high school sports. I had missed making the short drives to places like Lebanon, Frankfort and Attica. Hoosier Hysteria may not be what it was in our youth but it still matters in every corner of Montgomery and Hamilton counties.

While this seemingly never-ending pandemic has kept us out of high school gyms and football press boxes the past two years, I've been able to keep writing for you. I miss not getting feedback in person but the encouragement I've received from those in the office, as well as my wife – who's happy that I'm still writing while making a less stressful living outside of journalism – make even difficult times manageable.

Hopefully in 2022 Purdue basketball fans can unwrap a long-awaited gift like the Red Ryder air rifle Ralphie dreamed of in "A Christmas Story;" an NCAA championship. For our high schools in The Paper and The Times coverage areas, I wish for your teams to realize that not everyone can win a sectional or even a state title but the lessons learned from athletics will stay with you the rest of your life.

odd-looking dog and his little boy. The dog told me (yes, he talks!) they didn't plan on doing any time-traveling today because they'd be visiting friends. (I could have sworn he said something about a moose, a squirrel and Frostbite Falls, but maybe I misheard him.)

Anyway . . . follow me through the door of the WABAC (as in "way back") machine and get ready to blend into the crowd. I'm sure they won't notice a few thousand extra spectators. Just don't whip out your cell phone to take a photo or you'll have lots of 'splainin' to do.

Let's find a spot downtown on Conner Street. (This parade formed on 16th Street near the old high school — Ivy Tech now — like always, but from there it went west on Conner to Eighth Street, north to Logan, and east, back to 16th.)

Looks like we're just in time. Do you hear that Christmas music? That's got to be one of the high school bands. Four of them are marching in today's parade: Noblesville, Westfield, Sheridan and Jackson Central. (Remember Jackson Central? That's the school Jackson Township kids attended before Hamilton Heights was built.)

Also in today's parade are delegations from the Boy Scouts, the Hamilton County Horse Association and the V.F.W., and the American Legion has a couple of drummers, a fifer and a flag bearer dressed up as the "Spirit of '76."

I see Happy Herb! Remember him? He's the guy in the white sailor suit who introduced Popeye cartoons on Channel 4 (WTTV) for a few years before passing the show on to Janie (Hodge.) (His last name is Isaacs, by the way.)

Oh look, here come members of the Indiana National Guard, passing out bubble gum to the children in the crowd.

They're part of the 3rd Battalion, 139th Artillery and they've brought an 8" Howitzer AND an honest-to-goodness "Honest John" rocket. (Yes, a surface-to-surface missile with nuclear capability . . . right here in Hamilton County!)

There sure are a lot of drums in this parade. Those passing by just now belong to the Jr. & Sr.

Vaqueros, an award-winning local drum and baton corps.

Oooh, I just spotted MORE celebrities! The three men in that car are Harlow Hickenlooper (Hal Fryar,) Cap'n Star (Jerry Vance) and Curley Myers from WFBM-TV's "All Hands on Deck," another kids' show. (This was before Channel 6 became WRTV.)

Harlow has a habit of getting pies in the face. He'd better watch out. One of the clowns on the parade route might sneak up on him.

Or, maybe they'll get the Homecoming Queen to do it! I'll bet Harlow wouldn't see THAT coming!

Drat. This must be the end of the parade because here comes Santa Claus riding on a firetruck.

(Shhh. Don't tell anybody, but that's not really Santa. He was too busy getting ready for Christmas to be here today so local realtor Garrick Mallery is standing in for him.)

I wish we had time to check out the miniature train display, the puppet show at the Diana Theater, the tree lighting ceremony and Santa's new "Candy House," but I only borrowed the WABAC machine for about an hour so we could watch the parade.

If I don't get it back to that talking dog soon, he might sic Boris and Natasha on me!

Have a safe and happy Christmas!

(And keep your fingers crossed that the Grinch Who Stole the Christmas Parade will have a change of heart in 2022.)
