FACES OF HAMILTON COUNTY

What makes Thom Johnson smile? "The joy of spending time with my four grandsons, and finally a granddaughter, and the ability onstage in telling a story to make a character real, believable and appreciated by the audience, a fantastic director, talented fellow cast members and the support of a loving girlfriend throughout," said the Westfield resident, who is vice president of community engagement for Basile Westfield Playhouse, where he is currently on stage in a play. Johnson, who celebrated his 60th birthday on Sept. 19, this week was nominated for Encore Association's Best Minor Supporting Actor in a Musical for The Carmel Community Players' production of "The Fantasticks." He's performed in about 50 shows over the past 17 years, appearing also with The Belfry Theatre (during the 2017-18 season as a patient in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," for which the patients earned Best Ensemble in a Play from the Encore Association for 2017-18), Footlite Musicals, Epilogue, Buck Creek and Nickel Plate players, among others. He's currently in Westfield's production of "Curious Savage," opening Thursday and being directed by Nancy Lafferty. He graduated from Plainfield High School and University of Evansville with a degree in pre-theology. By day, he trains others in customer service for the State of Indiana. And Another Thing ... 1. Hoosier Win in Court

Indiana Attorney General Todd Rokita yesterday announced his office has recovered $2.9 million to settle allegations that a Northeast Indiana hospital network overbilled Indiana Medicaid between Jan. 2017 and March 2021

The overbilling resulted from the usage of improper revenue codes submitted to Medicaid for certain blood-clotting tests performed on patients at several hospital locations operated by Parkview Health System.

On behalf of Hoosiers, the Attorney General's have now recovered more than $429 million since Jan. 2021. That sum represents the work of four divisions: Complex Litigation; Consumer Protection; Litigation; and the Medicaid Fraud Control Unit.

The Myth of Crownland's 'Glowing Tombstone'

My reaction ran along the lines of "Whuuut?" Although I'd lived here all my life, this was news to me.

My friend went on to embellish his story, saying it was rumored that the monument belonged to a scientist who'd died of radiation poisoning and that was why the stone glowed.

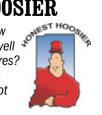

Yeah. Right. That's when I knew for sure I was being fed a tall tale.

When I started doing serious research in the old newspapers, however, I discovered that, like many a tall tale, there was a tiny — VERY tiny — grain of truth

Indiana Abortion Providers Accepting Patients While State Ban Stays On Hold

By Casey Smith

Clinics across Indiana are once again accepting patients seeking abortions after a county judge last week ordered a temporary pause to the state's near-total ban on the procedure.

An Owen County judge issued the preliminary injunction Thursday in a lawsuit that seeks to strike down Indiana's near-total abortion ban. The court order halted the state's new abortion law one week after it took effect.

Since then, clinics have rushed to resume abortion care. That has meant rescheduling appointments, re-assigning staff and making it clear to patients how they can access abortions while the ban stays on hold

Abortion care resumes in Indiana, for now

Judge Kelsey Blake Hanlon, a Republican, said in her ruling that the ban "materially burdens the bodily autonomy of Indiana's women and girls by significantly and arbitrarily limiting their access to care."

Under the injunction, the state's previous abortion law stands — allowing abortion up to 20 weeks.

A South Bend clinic is still working to coordinate staff in order to accept patients again, said Amy Hagstrom Miller, founder and CEO of Whole Woman's Health Alliance.

Meanwhile, calls to the Hoosier Abortion Fund have additionally picked back up since the law was paused, said Jessica Marchbank with All-Options Pregnancy Resource Center. The nonprofit operates a pregnancy resource center that includes the abortion fund. Many callers have been confused about the injunction and whether they still qualify to receive abortion care.

Planned Parenthood, historically the largest abortion provider in Indiana, made the procedure available again on Thursday, immediately following the injunction, said Nicole Erwin, a spokesperson for Planned Parenthood Alliance Advocates.

"This preliminary injunction is more critical than ever in making sure Hoosiers and patients outside of Indiana have access to time-sensitive, basic care, no matter what," Erwin told the Indiana Capital Chronicle.

After the U.S. Supreme Court reversed Roe v. Wade in June, Indiana has become "an important regional hub" to provide abortion care to patients in Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, and even as far as Texas, Erwin said. She noted, too, that if more states move forward with abortion bans, "we will continue to see an influx in out-of-state patients coming to Indiana for care."

She said the organization has spent months preparing for an abortion ban, including the development of a plan to help patients access abortion care out of state. Although not so necessary now, that pipeline could become vital again if the abortion ban takes effect again.

"The chaos, confusion, and devastation we are now seeing across the country is exactly the environment anti-abortion lawmakers have worked for decades to create, and it is no different in Indiana," Erwin said. "While the uncertainty surrounding access to abortion care may continue to change, our commitment to providing care has not — our doors remain open, and we are doing everything in our power to make sure patients know that we are here to help no matter what.'

Stipulations of the injunction

The pause on the ban

only applies to Marion, Monroe, Hendricks, Lake, St. Joseph, Tippecanoe and Warrick counties. Local prosecutors in those counties are defendants in the ACLU of Indiana lawsuit. Hanlon's ruling prohibits them - or the state Medical Licensing Board — from enforcing the new law. In those counties, physicians can continue to offer abortions, as previously allowed in the state, prior to Sept. 15.

Indiana University Health, the state's largest healthcare system, said its providers — that are located in the counties specified in the injunction — will "follow the law as it existed" before the ban took effect.

All of the abortions performed in Indiana last year were carried out in the seven counties, according to the Indiana Department of Health. Nearly three-quarters of the procedures were performed in Marion County, Indiana's most populous.

Still, it's not yet clear how many abortions have been performed since the injunction took effect including in cases when the procedure would have been illegal under the ban. Physicians are required by state law to submit a terminated pregnancy report to the state department of health within 30 days after performing an abortion for patients age 16 and older. Abortions performed on anyone younger must be submitted within three days, although state data indicates the vast majority — more than 99% of abortions in 2021 — are for those at least 16 years old.

The state requirements mean there's often a delay before reports are filed. Reliable data on abortions performed since the injunction won't be available for another month.

Court challenges ongoing

The Indiana Attorney General's Office filed an appeal late Thursday night that seeks to throw out the injunction. Lawyers representing the state are hoping to advance the issue straight to the Indiana Supreme Court.

No court dates have been scheduled vet for the appeal, but a motion filed Monday by state attorneys requested the matter be expedited, noting that "this life-and-death urgency demands immediate attention."

If Hanlon's ruling is suspended, the new abortion ban would take effect again.

The Indiana ban outlaws most abortions except in the case of a fatal fetal anomaly or serious health risk to the mother. One part of the law says these exceptions are up to 20 weeks but another part says they can be used anytime. Rape survivors can get an abortion up to 10 weeks post-fertilization. It also strips abortion clinics of their state medical licenses, and provides that only hospitals and hospital-owned ambulatory surgical centers can provide abortions.

A7

Still to come, a second lawsuit, also led by the ACLU of Indiana, seeks to strike down the ban on the basis that it violates Indiana's Religious Freedom Restoration Act. An initial hearing in the case has been set for Oct. 14.

our community," the Halls said. "This is a celebration of neighbors helping neighbors and if friends want to be involved in this way, they are part of our team, serving our neighbors. It's a party with a purpose: have fun and attract attention to the fact that most people don't know the face of hunger in Hamilton County. It's not readily acknowledged that people here need help. The purpose is bigger than us, bigger than any one person.'

The Halls have put together an amazing family-friendly six-hour festival of these three live bands, plus six food trucks, a beer garden, silent auction with some highly sought-after silent auction items, and more, in celebration of their feedingteam.org.

They expect a crowd of about 3,000 people and hope to beat last year's record of 7,000 items donated. Their goal is 10,000 items this year as we head into a hard winter for many folks in Hamilton County.

Mark and Lisa Hall have accomplished amazing things since they started placing their little yellow outdoor food pantries throughout the county. The organization's motto is "Take what you need, give what you can." The Noblesville couple created Feeding Families Hamilton County in April 2020 and in summer 2020 rebranded the nonprofit's name as the Feeding Team or www.Feedingteam.org. "We were going to stop at six (pantries)," Lisa Hall has said, because the pantries were going to be a nice community service project for their business's employees.

"I do believe God had something better in mind," Lisa Hall has said.

Last year at this time, they had 27 food pantries. This year, they have 48 pantries with the 49th food pantry opening this Friday at Legacy Christian School in Noblesville.

Their pantries include 23 Noblesville locations, seven Cicero locations, two Arcadia locations, four Fishers locations, two in Carmel, one in Sheridan, one in Westfield, three on the East side of Indianapolis, one in Anderson, one in Kokomo, one in Portland, one in Seymour, one in Tulsa, Okla., and one in Las Cruces, N.M. They have requests for more pantries in Pendleton, Anderson, Hancock County, Westfield, Washington, D.C., Colorado, Michigan and Ohio. They have an Eagle Scout building one and have asked IMMI to build another 15.

"We never expected it to be this big," Mark Hall said.

"Our plan from the beginning was to serve our neighbors in Hamilton County," he said. They help as many out of the area with plans, best practices and location ideas.

The reason for the Feeding Team Music Festival is to collect food and funds that will pack their little yellow outdoor pantries all winter.

The community is asked to bring non-perishable food for admission for hobbyman, for those who forget to bring food, Mark Hall has said.

The feedingteam.org provides 9,200 meals per month, and the community adds more to that.

"This fall and winter are expected to be particularly hard on families that are already food challenged. It's a critical need that we, as a community, can step into a gap and serve our neighbors in a real and meaningful way," Mark Hall said. The Halls thank their sponsors. The event is not possible without their support. Sponsors include Associated Builders and Contractors Indiana/Kentucky, EquipCon, Gaylor

Electric, Mark F Hall for Hamilton County (Mark Hall is an unopposed Republican candidate for Hamilton County Council District 3 seat in the November election), Talent Logistix and Williams Comfort Air.

Mark and Lisa Hall have two daughters, seven grandchildren, and have lived in Noblesville for more than 35 years. They are just weeks away from their 43rd wedding anniversary. The Halls are active members of Harbour Shores Church where they serve in music and teaching, and are members of the Noblesville Elks Lodge and Harbour Trees Golf Club.

Most of the pantry use

Mark and Lisa Hall enjoy watching live music themselves. So when they'd find a band they liked, they would tell them about feedingteam.org and ask them if they'd be interested in being a part of providing food to hungry neighbors.

to the story.

During the 1930s, Crownland actually did achieve a small degree of fame due to some strange lights that appeared in the cemetery.

But, before I get into those details, let me stop and describe the setting.

Back then, Crownland was outside the city limits, surrounded by farmland, most of which belonged to the County Farm. Monument Street east of 16th Street was little more than a country lane.

The closest homes except for the house of the cemetery's sexton – were about a quarter mile to the west in the Lincoln Park addition. (Lincoln Park is the area west of 16th Street, between Monument and North Streets — more or less.)

At that time, the cemetery was enclosed by a fence and each evening the gate (now the main entrance) was locked to keep out mischief-makers. In other words, the graveyard was already a pretty spooky place when mysterious lights were first noticed there around 1930 or '31.

News of the discovery spread and soon people from all over the state began showing up after dark to see the lights

In the beginning, the sexton, John Stern, found the whole business amusing. He knew there was a perfectly natural explanation for the phenomenon.

Stern told the Noblesville Daily Ledger in July of 1931 that what people were seeing was nothing more than light from street lights or the full moon, reflected off the polished surface of some of the tombstones.

Despite this published explanation, the cemetery continued to draw visitors, especially in autumn after the trees dropped their leaves and the lights were more easily seen. One evening, Stern couldn't resist having a little fun when a group of young people stopped outside the cemetery fence. As the youths discussed the eerie lights, the sexton let loose a few loud "whoops."

He said later, "I never saw a crowd of young people run faster to their car than they did and the speed of that machine would have done credit to one of the Speedway racers.

By 1935, Stern's amusement had turned into annoyance. People were coming to the cemetery nearly every night. Some even climbed the fence and invaded the grounds.

Hoping to put an end to the nuisance, Stern enlisted the aid of Sheriff Alvin Baker. One night the two men waited near the "glowing" monument until midnight, intending to shoot a revolver into the air to scare off would-be trespassers.

It was a wasted effort. Although some cars stopped outside the gate, nobody tried to go past the fence.

The curiosity seekers kept on coming until the City Council cut off the light shining into the cemetery by putting shades — thin metal bands — on some of the street lights in Lincoln Park. Finally, people began to believe Stern's explanation.

After that, the only lights seen in Crownland were lights that were obviously reflected from cars traveling east on Grant Street. Eventually, interest in the cemetery died down.

Note: I'm still looking for wooly worm sightings!
