FACES of HAMILTON COUNTY

What makes Craig Ogden smile? "Happy people," said the Noblesville resident and owner of The Mix Vintage and New Marketplace, a four-year-old business on Logan Street in downtown Noblesville. The Mix invites shoppers to "shop small" all weekend during the Small Business Saturday weekend, during which merchants in downtown Noblesville will offer special events all weekend. The Illinois native and his wife, Tonya, who have three adult children, Evan, Abigail and Avery, and owned Noblesville Antique Mall on the Courthouse Square for eight years, then sold the business and took a break. They moved from Fishers to Noblesville about five years ago. He enjoys the creative side of life. "From the beginning of my school years, art was my thing In third grade, I had an amazing art teacher who stayed after school so I could sit on the floor of her office and draw pictures on large pieces of paper. She made the effort of having my drawings displayed in the library." After high school, he went on to attend and graduate from Herron School of Art. During his fourth year at Herron, he started a graphic design business in his basement and built his business over the next 23 years, hiring "all the great young talent from Herron," he said. After his days in the graphic-design industry, he focused on his illustration and painting. Then he took a 10-year break and developed his hobby -- of collecting antiques, old tovs and signs -- into a business. Today's feature is a look back at one of The Times' previous Faces of Hamilton County. For the past three years, he has gone back to painting and has completed more than 100 paintings and has shown his work at many art shows and

City Councilman Jumps in Head First in Lead Role of 'The Sound of Music'

BETSY REASON The Times Editor

Noblesville Common Councilman Mark Boice drove his oldest daughter, Ali Boice, to a show audition and was just along for the ride to support her.

And the next thing he knew, he was asked to sing musical scales, read lines and have his photo taken with others auditioning for a role.

I was at the auditions with my own daughter, who was also auditioning. I saw and heard Mark Boice talking to guest show director Evan Elliott and going into another audition area. Just a few days later, we would find out that Mark Boice was cast as Capt. Georg von Trapp, the father and male lead, in The Belfry Theatre's holiday production of "The Sound of Music," which opens Friday and continues for a total of eight performances through Dec. 4 at The Ivy Tech Auditorium in Ali Boice was cast as one of his children.

Just eight days after their auditions, Kristen Boice posted on her Facebook page: "He is still in shock, excited for the memories that will be made with Ali and petrified all at the same time to be in his first-ever show after being an owl in preschool and a brief run at show choir in high school, which was a long time ago." She was so proud of her husband for "stepping way out of his comfort zone" and being the "amazing dad" that he is.

So I had to ask Mark Boice what he was thinking when he accepted this huge acting role?

His reply: "I love trying new and difficult endeavors to

I believe the best and most rewarding experiences come from pushing ourselves outside of our comfort zones. Acting on stage is certainly one of those experiences pushing me personally."

While Mark Boice admitted it's his "first time acting since being an owl in preschool," he said it's far from being his first time on The Ivy Tech Auditorium stage. The 1993 Noblesville High School graduate was a member of the NHS Singers mixed show choir on that very stage, the site of the former high school where he graduated. He was also in the orchestra and

OBITUARIES

Michelle Louise Arszman

July 1, 1952-November 14, 2022

Michelle Louise Arszman, 70, of Sheridan, passed away on Monday evening, Nov. 14, 2022, at Ascension St. Vincent Carmel Hospital.

She was born on July 1, 1952, in Indianapolis, the daughter of William H. and Francis Shirley Klein Worley.

After graduating from Ladywood High School in Indianapolis, she went on to earn her Bachelor's Degree in Nursing from IUPUI. Mrs.

Arszman was married to Hank Arszman III for 47 years. She dedicated her working years to helping others. She worked as an RN for over 30 years; first at Methodist Hospital and later at Hoosier Village before moving to the RHI Neuro Rehabilitation Center in Indianapolis. After retiring from RHI, she continued to stay involved in the nursing field as a substitute school nurse within the Westfield-Washington School Corporation for many years.

She also had quite the entrepreneurial spirit. A very gifted fiber artist and jewelry maker, she had her own shop, All Wooled Up, where she could sell her intricately detailed, one-of-a-kind creations. She also loved taking her inventory on the road, frequenting craft fairs and festivals throughout Indiana and Kentucky. It was time well-spent with her beloved husband, Hank, and daughter, Megan. She also had the world's largest heart when it came to animals. After growing up in a family that bred and showed dogs for generations, Mrs. Arszman worked side by side with her husband showing and breeding dogs for many years, and later showing horses. Together, the two built a life together on their family farm in Jolietville. He designed and built the buildings, and she kept everything running like a well-oiled machine.

Family was always the most important thing in Mrs. Arszman's life, both two-legged members and four. The brightest spot in her later life was when she was blessed with her only (human) grandchild, Aubrey, also known as "Gamm's Little Sunshine." She relished in sharing her studio with her granddaughter, where they'd make necklaces together and Aubrey would help choose colors for upcoming needle felting projects. Gamm's sole mission was to outfit Aubrey in as many cute and beautiful dresses as she could fit in her closet, while enjoying a laugh when Aubrey would partake in making mud pies with the donkeys wearing said-girly dresses.

Survivors include her 2 daughters, Erin (Jerry) J. Dean of Sheridan and Megan (Matt) L. Arszman-Weisbrodt of Westfield; 1 granddaughter Aubrey Weisbrodt; 2 sisters Pam (Ron) Burgess of Yuma, Arizona and Lisa (Jerry) Halcomb of Champaign, Illinois; 1 brother Patrick (Abby) Worley; and her 1 sister-in-law and brotherin-law Kathleen (Tim) J. Elmore of Indianapolis.

Preceding her in death were her parents William H. Klein and Shirley Klein Worley; the love of her life Henry John 'Hank' Arszman III, who passed on Oct. 17, 2020 - the two were married on Oct. 14, 1973; and Hank's golden retriever, Leah, who became her guardian angel Memorial contributions may be presented to the Humane Society of Clinton County in Frankfort.

Her commitment to these relationships was so sincere that after spending most of her life in New England, she chose to move to Elwood in 2021 so that she could be closer to her daughter, son-inlaw and grandchildren to continue watching them grow into the wonderful people they are still becoming.

200K Pounds of Poultry Products Donated to Hoosiers This Year

Yesterday, Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch, Indiana State Department of Agriculture Director Bruce Kettler and the Indiana State Poultry Association (ISPA) recognized Indiana's poultry producers at the 75th annual Indiana state poultry recognition event at the Indiana Statehouse.

Over the past year, Indiana poultry farmers have donated nearly 100 tons or 200,000 pounds of poultry products to Hoosiers in need.

"I am so proud of the Hoosier poultry producers and the large impact they have on food-insecure Hoosiers," said Lt. Gov. Crouch, who also serves as Indiana's Secretary of Agriculture and Rural Development.

"Donating
200,000pounds of poultry products throughout the year is an incredible feat, and I am grateful I was able to thank them in person today for their generous donations."

For decades, Indiana's poultry producers have been working to address food insecurity in their local communities by providing protein to food banks across the state. Some of the main products that were donated over the course of this year include eggs, chicken, duck and turkey.

The strength of Indiana's poultry sector was also recognized during the ceremony as Indiana is one of the top poultry producing states in the country. According to the USDA National Agriculture Statistics Service, Indiana ranks No. 1 in duck production, No. 2 in egg production, No. 4 in turkey production and is home to high quality broiler chicken production as well.

The poultry industry is a major economic driver for the state, contributing over $15 billion in total economic activity. Additionally, the industry employs more than 12,500 Hoosiers.

"Our Hoosier farmers are incredibly generous and quick to give back to their community," said Bruce Kettler, director of the Indiana State Department of Agriculture.

"This event highlights their year-round contributions to various food banks and pantries located throughout Indiana and we are grateful to recognize them."

ISPA members continually give back to their local communities throughout the year. According to ISPA president Becky Joniskan the large poultry donations come from the small communities across Indiana that our poultry farming families call home.

"Indiana's bountiful, high quality feed, ample water supply, dedicated farmers, and business climate that understands the needs of agriculture make it an ideal place to raise poultry," said Joniskan.

"We pride ourselves on feeding our neighbors, our nation, and, indeed, the world, with wholesome, nutritious poultry products."

Yesterday's items on display were donated to Food Finders Food Bank in Lafayette. The ceremony marked an annual tradition that dates back to the late 1940s.

Organized by ISPA, one of the oldest poultry organizations in the nation, it was designed to recognize the strength of Indiana's poultry industry, as well as the annual donations made by its members, who are responsible for more than 95% of the chicken, duck, turkey and eggs produced in Indiana.

An investigator at the Indiana Attorney General's Office said in court Monday that the agency is still pursuing consumer complaints against an Indianapolis-based doctor who is at the center of a controversial abortion case

This despite testimony and evidence that appears to show Dr. Caitlin Bernard communicated with Ohio authorities even before performing the abortion on a 10-year-old girl from Ohio in June. And she notified Indiana Department of Child Services a few days after the abortion.

She and her lawyers argued the complaints are "frivolous" and that she followed all legal and professional protocols.

The case drew national attention and was a major factor in obtaining rape exceptions in Indiana's new abortion ban.

The court matter stems from an emergency order filed by Bernard and her medical partner Dr. Amy Caldwell. Lawyers for the doctors are trying to block Attorney General Todd Rokita's office from accessing the abortion patients' medical records, and also prevent future "unchecked oversteps" by the attorney general.

Marion County Superior Court Judge Heather Welch held an emergency hearing on the injunction request Monday, following an earlier one Friday. The doctors filed their complaint earlier this month — and then an emergency court order last week.

Attorneys for the state concede that Bernard submitted a terminated pregnancy report on time, but emphasized that the doctor should have "immediately" reported to Indiana DCS or local law enforcement her reason to believe that an underage patient was a victim of abuse or neglect.

Kathleen DeLaney, the attorney representing to Indianapolis-based doctors, talked to reporters Monday outside the Marion County Superior Court in Indianapolis.

What does immediately mean?

The attorney general's office said in court filings that the immediacy requirement conveys "a required strong sense of urgency in action and primacy of purpose in fulfilling the duty to report." That could mean a need to report such abuse within "hours" of first meeting with the patient. The law doesn't define what "immediately" means, however.

Legal documents obtained by the Indiana Capital Chronicle, as well as Bernard's court filings, say she submitted the terminated pregnancy report to Indiana DCS less than three days after administering abortion-inducing medication to the child.

In her email notification to Indiana DCS, Bernard indicated that the case "was already reported through DCS in Ohio." Speaking on the stand, Bernard doubled down, saying she communicated and cooperated with law enforcement officials in Ohio from the time she was notified by an Ohio physician seeking help with the child's case. That was days before Bernard said she first met with the patient in-person.

The social work team at Indiana University Health was looped in "within minutes" of her initial phone call with the Ohio physician who referred the 10-year-old to her office, Bernard continued.

"We work together, including other physicians who advise us and our social work department, to determine what and when any reporting is necessary, and we work together as a team to perform that reporting," Bernard said.

Katharine Melnick, who supervises the special victims unit at the Marion County Prosecutor's office, additionally testified on Monday that she would not expect a doctor in Bernard's situation to report the child abuse to local police or DCS Melnick emphasized that Indianapolis police would not have jurisdiction over the case since the abuse happened in Ohio. It would only make sense for Indiana DCS to be notified if the child was to reside in Indiana long-term, she added.

"If it's already been reported (in Ohio), there is no further duty to report," Melnick said. Still, state attorneys argued that if Indiana authorities had been notified earlier, they could have intervened to prevent the 10-year-old girl from having any contact with her abuser upon her return to Ohio.

Extensive hearing Monday's hearing lasted nearly five hours. Mary Hutchison, a deputy attorney general and section chief of the attorney general's licensing enforcement division, was brought to the stand by attorneys for the state and questioned by the doctors' lawyers for two hours.

Counsel for the attorney general's office then called Bernard to testify. Questioning from both parties took over an hour and largely centered around the doctor's timeline for reporting the 10-year-old's abuse.

The judge has yet to rule on the plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction. Welch said she anticipates making a ruling by the end of next week.

In July, Bernard told the IndyStar she performed an abortion on a 10-year-old rape victim who couldn't access care in their home state of Ohio following that state's abortion ban. In response, several conservative figures claimed the doctor was fabricating the story or, at the very least, hadn't filed the proper paperwork.

A terminated pregnancy report released the next day documented the abortion care received by the girl and an arrest in Ohio soon followed.

But according to Bernard's lawsuit, Rokita continues to pursue a "baseless investigation" into her office, expanding his inquires to Caldwell. The doctor claims that Rokita used complaints filed against her — after Bernard's story went public — to launch an investigation into her practice, even though none of the complainants had received care from Bernard, and several didn't live in Indiana.

Lawyers representing the state said in court last week that the attorney general's office had concluded its investigation relating to Caldwell.

But Hutchison confirmed in court on Monday that the attorney general's office is still investigating eight consumer complaints against Bernard. That's despite scrutiny from Kathleen DeLaney, Bernard and Caldwell's attorney, who repeatedly noted that the complaints are "meritless.

Hutchison said she still has lingering questions surrounding Bernard's "timely" notification to law enforcement about the 10-year-old's abuse.

The deputy attorney general said her team has been "unable to determine" whether Bernard spoke to Indianapolis law enforcement or Indiana's Department of Child Services (DCS) "immediately" following her first meeting with the patient.

State attorneys argue Bernard wasn't authorized to talk to media

Hutchison said Monday she wasn't previously aware of communication Bernard had with the hospital's social work team. After she was presented with evidence while on the stand, Hutchison said she still planned to investigate whether Bernard reported to the proper staff.

Further, Hutchison said she is still investigating whether Bernard first obtained written authorization from the patient or a guardian, allowing her to legally share protected health information to the media.

Bernard did not directly address the state's questions about such authorization while on the stand, but her attorneys maintained it's acceptable for doctors to share "de-identified" patient information. That's the kind of information Bernard shared with the media, her lawyers said.

"Dr. Bernard fully complied with all privacy rules," DeLaney said. "The bottom line is, because Dr. Bernard never disclosed any protected info, she did not violate any privacy requirements."

multiple NHS bands at NHS, where he placed second in the state music competition playing the trumpet.

This show offers an opportunity that not many people get. "It is a joy to play this role as a father alongside my daughter," Mark Boice said. Ali Boice portrays the captain's mischievous 13-year-old daughter, Louisa von Trapp.

"Ali is a junior at Legacy Christian School, so I won't have many more opportunities to do things with her before she goes to college," the dad said.

So what's it been like rehearsing for a show with his actress daughter Ali? "It has been even more of a bonding experience and created some cherished memories together," he said.

While the dad doesn't have any acting experience since elementary school, he is familiar with theater productions, months of rehearsals and what it takes to be in those actor shoes, because both of their daughters, Ali and Kate Boice, have been acting on stage since they were elementary age, both at school, and at community and equity theaters.

"It has been so much fun to debrief after rehearsals with Ali nightly.

He said, "Ali jokingly wants to know which child is the Captain's favorite.'

Their other daughter, Kate, a freshman at NHS, acted on stage over the weekend as Hunyak, an innocent Hungarian immigrant accused of murder, in NHS's "Chicago: Teen Edition" fall musical. Mark and Kristen Boice attended nightly to support Kate.

Mark Boice enlisted the advice and help of both of his daughters, who have "both been inspiring and encouraging for me in this opportunity.'

"Her favorite line is when I tell everyone I am very happy with absolutely no enthusiasm conveying to the audience that I am not joyful."

He said, Kate loves acting, so she has spent hours giving me advice on being in character, singing and conveying emotions."

Mark Boice didn't count the number of lines he had to memorize for the show, "but it was more than I remembered," he said. "When I first got the script, I highlighted all of my lines. I then flipped through it and there was so much yellow that I got overwhelmed." (My daughter, who is a friend of Kate Boice, also recommended to him a Line-Learner phone app "which has been a big help and allowed me to learn lines while in the car and on the go," he said.

Kristen Boice has been great and supportive of her husband's adult acting "Balancing my job, City Council, being a dad and the role has been a challenge, and I could not have done it without Kristen. We go over the family calendar at the beginning of every week and figure out how we can divide and get all four of us everywhere on time. She is also the mom manager doing things like writing up the girls' bios for shows, so it is fun to watch her add 'my things' this round," Mark Boice said. And as far as playing the lead role, he said, "I am excited and honored to play Captain von Trapp. He is such an interesting and complex character. The captain feels the stress of raising his children alone while bearing the weight of his entire country. He lost his wife, and his best friend seems to only like him because of his money. Trapp was a successful Navy captain where he ruled with order and discipline, so he uses those tactics in all facets of his life. When Maria (the lead actress, played by XxxxXX) shows how this method isn't working, he instantly feels disappointed and failing."

Mark Boice said, "I think many of us can relate to the shame he experiences with regards to parenting, leading others and even feeling alone and lost at times."

WIth only two days until opening night, is he a little nervous?

"At first, I was just scared to get up on stage and sing in front of people, but I am getting more excited as we get closer to the show. I have a lot of friends coming to the show, and I'm very excited for them to experience it."

He commended fellow cast members. "The cast is incredibly talented, so I'm excited for my friends to experience the songs.

Kristen made up the word last week that I am 'scited,' both scared and excited,' he said.

"'The Sound of Music'" was the first musical my daughters fell in love with as little girls. I think we wore out the DVD when they were little from playing it so much. Learning the part has brought us so many great memories from the past. I hadn't watched the show in years before getting cast, but now I have scoured the internet and watched almost every You-Tube version I can find. I've tried to study every Captain (von Trapp) to get inspiration and learn from each individual."

He is taking this role very seriously and will be ready to go on stage when the curtain opens on Friday night.

When he was asked if he would put a Belfry Theatre "Sound of Music" yard sign in his front yard to promote the show, he said he would be happy to put up a sign. But he admitted, "I think everyone on our street has purchased tickets (for opening night) ... I'm worried there is going to be a lot of heckling that night."

He said, "The first thing people ask him is if I am going to sing 'Edelweiss' alone. That song is iconic with the Captain, and everyone knows it so I have been practicing it daily. My neighbors have probably heard it countless times as I sing it while walking the dogs on our trail."

Mark Boice said, "I had forgotten how many songs the Captain really sings, though. He has parts in eight songs, so getting my voice back in shape has been a priority.

Brenna Whitaker, the musical director, has been "excellent" to work with and has recorded multiple tracks and scales for him to practice with and helped with his breathing and diction. He said, "I always sang the bass (lowest) part in high school show choir, but Brenna thinks I am more of a baritone."

Elliott, assistant director for NHS Thespians and who is enjoying his first time as guest director for The Belfry's production of "The Sound of Music," had great things to say about his lead actor.

Elliott said, "Mark has been a joy to direct. He was one of the first actors off-book and takes pride in the entire process. From audition day to dress rehearsals, his role as a father has helped him to find the nuances in the Captain's behavior. Mark's 'Captain' is authoritative but also explores the show's softer moments. 'Edelweiss' his featured song, is very well done. I hope this is just the beginning for him in the local theater scene.'

county's pre-Civil War newspapers. However, other Indiana newspapers make it clear that by the time Abraham Lincoln established a fixed day for the holiday in 1863, Thanksgiving menus were pretty much the same as they are today — with a few exceptions.

Then, as now, roast turkey took center stage.

The earliest mention I found of turkeys being part of local Thanksgiving feasts appears in the December 11, 1874 Noblesville Ledger — "Thanksgiving is over, and a few turkeys are left for Christmas."

As early as 1879, you could buy dressed turkeys for the holidays in Noblesville's groceries. In 1882 J. E. Killen's store on the south side of the courthouse square offered shoppers a choice of dressed OR live turkeys. (Live turkeys!)

Of course, some people continued to hunt their own turkeys for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners. In 1874 the Ledger noted that one local man had bagged a 25 pound wild turkey with "a magnificent beard of 13 inches.

I tend to think of cranberries as coming from Massachusetts or Wisconsin, so I was surprised to discover they weren't that difficult to find around here in the 19th century. In fact, a farmer in LaPorte County in northern Indiana produced 8,000 bushels in

That may be how T. P. Swain was able to advertise cranberries (presumably fresh ones) for sale in his grocery that November. No prices were mentioned in Swain's ad, but I saw a market report that the berries had sold for ten cents a quart the previous year.

Another surprising Thanksgiving item was celery. We take the availability of celery for granted today, but it wasn't always that easy to come by in the late 1800s and was, therefore, highlighted in Thanksgiving grocery ads. A 1900 Democrat article noted that 35 to 40 years earlier it hadn't been unusual for someone to travel as far as 25 miles away to pick up celery for Thanksgiving dinner.

What surprised me most, however, is that oysters were considered a normal part of Thanksgiving dinners in the 19th century. (Oysters . . . in landlocked Indiana!) I'm not talking about oyster dressing necessarily. No, I mean plain old oysters, served every way you can think of. Hamilton County people apparently LOVED oysters. The newspapers are full of restaurant and grocery advertisements for them, and oyster suppers were as popular then as chicken dinners would be in the early 20th century. In 1881 restaurant owner Frank Becker even offered to deliver fresh oysters, in bulk or can, twice a day, to any part of Noblesville!

Dessert at these early Thanksgiving dinners was generally mincemeat and/or pumpkin pie.

If a housewife didn't have time to make her own mincemeat, she was in luck In 1875. Killen Bro.'s grocery advertised mincemeat "ready for use, made by responsible parties." J. K. Farrell, who operated a grocery near the train depot, also sold homemade mincemeat. His cost 13 cents a pound.

Pumpkin pie was so common, I couldn't find much about it in the newspapers. The October 22, 1897, Hamilton County Ledger has a great quote, though — "No man, unless he be a heathen, ever eats a genuine pumpkin pie without thinking of his mother, home, Thanksgiving and schoolboy days.

These weren't the only dishes often served at early Thanksgiving feasts. That 1900 Democrat article also mentions chicken pie, cold roast pig, mashed potatoes and turnips, boiled onions, baked Indian pudding, nuts, raisins, fruit, cider and coffee.

Hungry yet? Happy Thanksgiving!

at all. It's actually a lake that's about 14 miles long by seven miles wide. It's been called a sea, according to our tour guide, because of a mistranslation.

We started day three at the site of the Sermon on the Mount of Beatitudes. I hate to be repetitive, but the feeling of walking where Jesus Christ walked is unlike anything I have ever experienced.

Next we stopped at Caesarea Philippi where Peter first declared that "this is the Christ.'

And our day was just starting. As we drove from site to site, this reporter could not help but notice how every hillside and many flat areas were littered with rocks. Large boulders to small pebbles – and everything in between, they were everywhere. It brought to mind a scene from The Chosen where two of the apostles were clearing a field of rocks. Seeing how many there are in person put that in a whole different perspective.

You also notice how many thorny bushes and trees there are - prompting our guide to remark how easy it was for them to make the crown of thorns.

When you are standing at the bottom of Hermon Mount, the sheer size is almost overwhelming. You are at the bottom of a large rock face – and vou understand that at one time this was said to be the gate to Hades, thus the reference from Matthew. Walking up the path to stand where the trail ends and the rock begins makes you wonder – is this the spot Jesus stood when he said those famous words? We also spent a lot of time today in what you know as Capernaum – but here it is spelled Capharnaum – the city where Jesus chose five apostles Simon (Peter), Andrew, James, John (all fisherman) and the tax collector Matthew. Capernaum was also the site of Peter's home - the very site which is still there today. This is the place where the paralytic was lowered through Peter's roof so Jesus could heal him and the site where He healed Peter's mother-in-law.

And we stood there. Right there.

We drove to the Golan Heights, passed within 10 miles of the Syrian border and saw Lebanon just one hill away. We drove by old bunkers from the 1967 Six Day War and crossed the River Jordan several times. Turns out that it's not really a river either. It's just not that big.

Speaking of water, the day really did wrap around the sea that isn't a sea. We got into a wooden boat and went for a short ride asking our guide if the place where Jesus walked on water was known (sadly, he said no) and we ate fish for lunch. I stared at a complete fish, from head to tail, on my plate and noticed he was staring right back at me. But the Israeli owner of the restaurant said God bless the USA, so I respectfully said nothing and ate the fish, tried the dates and had the strongest coffee I ever tasted.

It went along with our theme this week – just roll with it.

Tomorrow - more from Jordan.
