What makes Bob Benson smile? "I just enjoy watching these kids," said the Westfield resident and executive director of the Indiana Sheep Association, who was found watching youth compete in the Sheep to Shawl Contest at the Indiana State Fair. "I come down to support the Sheep to Shawl Contest and several other activities that the Association has," he said. Benson was the highest bidder, at $400, on an orange, pink and ivory freshly-woven scarf (above) that was made by the Conner Prairie youth volunteer "1970s Flower Power" spinning team during the four-hour contest. Benson, who has been involved with the Sheep Association for 30 years, has been attending the Sheep to Shawl contest since it started about 15 years ago. "I have fun, and it's tremendous to watch them," he said. How many scarves did he bid on? "I just bid on one today." He's bid on and won several youth scarves through the years at the contest "I like to support the wool industry," he said. "The spinning and weaving is also a part of the sheep legacy that we have over the years." He was born in Ohio and transferred here from St. Louis, Mo., in 1968, and said, "I've been here ever since." He's a member of Westfield Lions Club. He has a wife, three children, and she has two, and they have three grandchildren. He has been retired "for a long time." Benson was found watching the contest with Larry Hopkins, former president of the Indiana Sheep Association and owner of Little Eagle Creek Valley Farm in Westfield, which donates fleece to the Conner Prairie spinning program. Benson said, "I do the executive job as a volunteer because I have a passion for the industry." Read more about Conner Prairie youth volunteers' participation in the Indiana State Fair Sheep to Shawl Contest in the Betsy Reason column in today's edition of The Times.

Conner Prairie Youth Keep Traditions Alive

BETSY REASON
From The Editor's Desk...

If you've been to the Sheep to Shawl Contest on the last day of the Indiana State Fair, you were probably amazed at the talent of the youth. If you haven't attended, put the competition on your calendar for 2024.

Every year, the Sheep to Shawl finds dozens of youth spinners, including my daughter, competing on teams that have four hours to make a scarf, from start to finish, including carding the fleece, spinning it on spinning wheels, plying wool strands together and weaving it into a scarf.

The south end of the main floor of the Indiana Arts Building is filled with youth on spinning wheels and weaving looms. It's such a great event to watch.

Conner Prairie textile specialist and Conner Prairie's longest employee Sue Payne trains Conner Prairie youth volunteers, ages 10 to 18, male and female, beginning each spring during "spinning training" at Conner Prairie.

It's so great to watch the youth volunteers sit at their spinning wheels or weaving looms practicing their skills, knowing that they're keeping alive the tradition of the historic art.

The spinners learn not only to compete at the State Fair but also to volunteer in Conner Prairie's Loom House, which is also a goal for youth, who need to attend 10 spinning practices (20 hours with Payne) before competing.

"The most satisfying part for me, and bittersweet, too, is watching them come in at 10 or 11 years old and maturing, working with others, setting personal goals and being excited to learn new skills," Payne said.

Early Sunday morning on Aug. 20, Payne and her spinning volunteers, and their parents, packed up 22 spinning wheels, four weaving looms, raw fleece and boxes of equipment and headed, in a convoy, to the State Fair Fairgrounds to spin and weave in an intense and fun competition.

Upon arrival, at 8:30 a.m., youth set up their team areas with chairs, spinning wheels,

The Boogeyman Lives In My Kitchen

PAULA DUNN
From Time to Thyme

I don't know about you, but between the weather, the economy and holiday burn out, I feel the need for a good laugh. Luckily, my furry family, Arie and Chloe, have always been more than happy to help out with that.

Arie alone has had some notable exploits. Before I adopted him from the Indianapolis Humane Society, I thought I had gotten rid of everything in the house that might make a kitten sick. I didn't know I was getting an eating machine whose definition of "edible" didn't match mine.

He grew so fast he consumed pretty much anything that wasn't nailed down (dust bunnies, used Q-Tips, leather shoelaces....) and sometimes the outcome wasn't exactly fragrant. Once, whatever he'd eaten had my cousin, the Dancing Librarian, and me switching rooms three times, trying to escape his "perfume." Naturally, each time we moved, he followed, blissfully unaware of the reason we were on the run.

I hadn't had him too long when the DL volunteered to babysit so I could visit a friend for a couple of days. I warned her of his appetite, but apparently she filed the information away and promptly forgot it — to her regret.

That evening when she sat down to eat her dinner of barbecued ribs, she suddenly discovered a small hunk of ravenous fur attached to her shoulder. Of course, he had waited until her hands were covered with barbecue sauce. I'm still not sure how she managed to dislodge him without getting sauce all over him, herself and the room.

She got back at him later that night, though, when she removed her glasses in order to read something. She said he was absolutely horrified — "AAAAIIIIIIII!! SHE'S TAKEN PART OF HER FACE OFF!!!" He didn't calm down until she put her glasses back on.

When I was a kid, I thought animals didn't get expressions on their faces. Boy, do I know better now. I saw that same terror on Arie's face on another occasion.

He was a little older then, but not much. He'd just discovered he could open some of the kitchen cabinets that are near the floor. He was having a high old time until he got around to the cabinet where I keep the pots and pans.

I was in another room when I heard CLANG, BANG, CLATTER, RATTLE!

As I hurried to the kitchen to clean up the mess I knew I'd find, Arie flew past me head-

Hamilton County Legislators Seek Statehouse Interns For 2024 Session

Local lawmakers are seeking interns to join them at the Statehouse during the 2024 legislative session.

According to House Speaker Todd Huston (R-Fishers), House interns will be paid $900 bi-weekly as they work in downtown Indianapolis during session, which starts in January and concludes mid-March.

"The House Republican internship is a unique opportunity for students and recent graduates to explore their interests, build their portfolio and gain work experience," Huston said. "Whether it's helping constituents or working on policy, House interns manage a lot of responsibilities, and this program can help set them apart from other candidates when looking for future jobs."

State Rep. Chuck Goodrich (R-Noblesville) said House internships are open to college students and recent graduates of all majors.

"This internship is a great opportunity for students to develop new skills, network and work through challenges that will prepare them for the competitive workforce," Goodrich said. "I hope to see local Hoosiers apply for this rewarding experience."

Paid, spring-semester intern positions are full time, Monday through Friday, and include free parking, career and professional development assistance, enrollment access to an Indiana government class, and opportunities to earn academic credits through the student's college or university. Interns are also eligible to apply for a competitive $3,000 scholarship to use toward undergraduate and graduate expenses.

"Internships are critical to developing time management, communication and writing skills that will be used in any career," said State Rep. Chris Jeter (R-Fishers). "I encourage students to apply for this opportunity where they will build their resumes and make lifelong professional connections."

According to State Rep. Donna Schaibley (R-Carmel), students can apply for internships in a variety of departments related to their field of study, including legislative operations, policy, and communications and media relations.

"Whether it's covering committees or press conferences, our interns are key to helping session run smoothly," Schaibley said. "Students and recent graduates looking for a unique and rewarding internship at the Statehouse should apply soon."

State Rep. Jerry Torr (R-Carmel) said applications are available online at indianahouserpublicans.com/internship and are due by Oct. 31.

"This is a great opportunity to serve Hoosiers while taking on more responsibility as a young adult," Torr said. "Our interns work directly with legislators from across Indiana, and get a firsthand look at how laws are made as well as the impact they can make on Hoosiers."

Recent Controversy Reminds Writer Of Another

SUSAN MILLER
Guest Column

The misguided censorship ploy of four extremists on the Hamilton East Public Library board that

That board's misguided decision got some press coverage, too. When the Indiana chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union read about it, the organization hosted a marathon reading of the book at Noble Coffee and Tea in protest of the school board's action.

Proud card-carrying member of the ACLU that I am, I took part in that well-attended read-a-thon and later wrote a poem about it titled, "The Banned Book."

The poem was published in the 2018 edition of The Polk Street Review, which was founded, coincidentally, by the newest member of the HEPL board, Bill Kenley. I am sharing the poem here.

The Banned Book
In the coffee house on the town square, we took turns reading aloud from the book banned by the school board, censored for the erotic fantasy that swept through one character's mind, as if such ideas would never occur to those high school readers, they with their riotous hormones.

One of those students joined us on that day. He settled into the leather chair, opened the book and read words forbidden to him, while his parents looked on.

One by one, others read:

A mother a lawyer a plumber
a neighbor
a business owner a cook, and people passing by, lending their many voices so that intellectual freedom could live in America for one more day.

Censorship is never a good choice for any community. It speaks of small minded authoritarians and their attempts to limit the intellectual freedom of its residents. That includes the intellectual freedom of its children. Parents are the best arbiters of what their children should or should not read and when they should read it.

My mother gave me books with content now being censored at HEPL when I was a young teen. She told me to read the books and then we would talk about them. I did and we did. I learned things I needed to know and she answered all my questions. Nobody tried to tell her or me that I couldn't read those books, and that's as it should be. She knew when I needed to have that information and she made sure I got it. In America, land of the free, that's every parent's right.

I know of no instance in history where the censors were the good guys. I subscribe to President John F. Kennedy's view on the subject, published in the Oct. 29, 1960 issue of the Saturday Review:

"If this nation is to be wise as well as strong, if we are to achieve our destiny, then we need more new ideas for more wise men reading more good books in more public libraries. These libraries should be open to all—except the censor. We must know all the facts and hear all the alternatives and listen to all the criticisms. Let us welcome controversial books and controversial authors. For the Bill of Rights is the guardian of our security as well as our liberty." JFK has been so prevalent in local and national news lately isn't the first time that censorship has reared its ugly head in Noblesville.

In 2002, an equally misguided Noblesville School Board voted to ban the book, "Follow the River" by another Indiana author, James Alexander Thom.

Thom's book had been on the required 10th grade reading list at Noblesville High School until a parent complained about one scene in Chapter 27. Wiser parents, who understood the literary value of that historical fiction book, lobbied the board to reinstate it on the reading list. Their pleas were ignored.

How is it that a tiny minority of small-minded, fearful parents are allowed to take away the freedom of other parents to decide what their children can read? If any parent does not want their child to read a specific book, that's their rightful decision. That parent could have worked with the school to get the child exempted from reading and class discussion of that particular book. Problem solved. No one else's freedoms are infringed upon.

But is that what happened? Oh hell no. The school board in 2002 couldn't do anything as simple and as reasonable as that. All Noblesville 10th grade kids were forbidden to read that book and discuss it in class, all so that one kid wouldn't be subjected to it. Government over-reach and overreaction? Yes.

Ivy Tech Community College Named To 2023 Forbes America's Best State Employers

For the second year, Ivy Tech Community College was named in the annual Forbes America's Best State Employers.

Along with market research company Statista, Forbes' rankings identify the companies positively rated by their employees on a variety of criteria, including the safety of work environment, fairness of compensation, opportunities for advancement, openness to telecommuting, and likelihood to recommend their employer to others. The final list ranks the 1,392 employers that received the greatest number of recommendations in each of the 50 states and the District of Columbia. Indiana's list includes 73 employers, but only six institutions of higher education. Only seven community colleges nationally made the list.

"I am pleased that Ivy

Tech has been recognized by Forbes for the second straight year," Dr. Sue Ellspermann, Ivy Tech President said. "We understand our colleagues are our ambassadors to the communities we serve with their incredible commitment to student success and the mission of the college. We continue to focus on making Ivy Tech a great place to work to attract the best and brightest."

Romanticizing The Autumn Season This Year

LINDSAY ROSA
The Curious Closet

If the back-to-school schedule is feeling hectic after a sleepy and restful summer break, consider the thought of romanticizing this time of year to slow that pace down and enjoy this transition time more. So nostalgic for some, spooky season this year is being marketed rather early and intensely. After the heat last week, I've noticed many shoppers hurrying home after their pilgrimage to the straw-lined and corn-husk-filled aisles of the Noblesville Hobby Lobby. It seems autumn is in the air as we are ready to tuck away summer tank tops and pull out a warm sweater, light a candle and listen to the sound of rain on a drizzly autumn day with a fire crackling. As someone who is back in school, I know that stress can creep in with new homework times along with the added zinger of financial stress of back-to-school shopping. How to really enjoy this special time of year?

I've compiled a few tips to streamline this sometimes chaotic time of football schedules and after-school activities to slow down and really enjoy the simple pleasures of the season.

1. Less is more, enjoy the simplicity and beauty of the season, doing less and savoring the moment and taking your time to experience joy. Applying this philosophy to your decorating, dressing and meal prep can be helpful.
2. Take pictures of your kids decorating with you, rearrange your space or desk using decor you already have with a new ribbon or candle.
3. Don't fall for the marketing ploy to get you to spend more than you want. Instead, try creating a mood board on Pinterest for your home's decor this season to streamline your shopping.
4. Current design trends focus on curating a few chosen objects so select a few family heirlooms and mix them with a few new decor pieces.

5. Stock up on economy coffee, creamer, and whipped cream for your very own at home coffee shop and avoid the lines and cost of a PSL habit.

6. Venturing over to the men's section of Goodwill with a fall beverage in hand may be more fruitful than an expensive menswear inspired boutique option.

7. Lastly, making a simple comforting soup or crockpot recipe for a weekend can definitely bring in those welcome autumn vibes for minimal effort so that you can enjoy the time spent with those you love to treasure this special season.

Fall is coming. Enjoy!

NOTICE OF REAL PROPERTY TAX SALE Hamilton County Indiana Beginning 10:00 AM Local Time, October 12, 2023 2nd Floor Historic Courtroom, 33 N 9th St., Noblesville, In 46060 Hamilton County

Pursuant to the laws of the Indiana General Assembly, notice is hereby given that the following described property is listed for sale for delinquent taxes and/or special assessments. The county auditor and county treasurer will apply on or after 09/22/2023 for a court judgment against the tracts or real property for an amount that is not less than the amount set out below and for an order to sell the tracts or real property at public auction to the highest bidder, subject to the right of redemption. Any defense to the application for judgment must be filed with the Hamilton County Superior 3 Court and served on the county auditor and treasurer before 09/22/2023. The court will set a date for a hearing at least seven (7) days before the advertised date of sale and the court will determine any defenses to the application for judgment at the hearing. The county auditor and the county treasurer are entitled to receive all pleadings, motions, petitions, and other filings related to the defense to the application for judgment. Such sale will be held on 10/12/2023 at the 2nd Floor Historic Courtroom, 33 N 9th St., Noblesville, In 46060 and that sale will continue until all tracts and real property have been offered for sale. At the discretion of local officials, the tax sale may switch to an online format. If those measures are taking place, the public auction will be conducted as an electronic sale under IC 6-1.1-24-2 (b) 10 at www.zeusauction.com commencing on the same date/time listed above. All location updates will be posted at www.sriservices.com prior to the tax sale.

- Property will not be sold for an amount which is less than the sum of: (A) the delinquent taxes and special assessments on each tract or item of real property; and (B) the taxes and special assessments on the real property that are due and payable in the year of the sale, whether or not they are delinquent; and (C) all penalties due on the delinquencies, and (D) an amount prescribed by the county auditor that equals the sum of: (1) fifty-five dollars ($55) for postage and publication costs; and (2) any other costs incurred by the county that are directly attributable to the tax sale; and (E) any unpaid costs due under IC 6-1.1-24-2(c) from a prior tax sale.

No property listed below shall be sold if, at any time before the sale, the Total Amount for Judgment is paid in full. If the real property is sold in the tax sale, the amount required to redeem such property will be 110% of the minimum bid for which the tract or real property was offered at the time of sale, if redeemed not more than six (6) months after the date of sale, or 115% of the minimum bid for which the tract or real property was offered at the time of sale, if redeemed more than six (6) months after the date of sale, plus the amount by which the purchase price exceeds the minimum bid on the real property plus five percent (5%) per annum interest on the amount by which the purchase price exceeds the minimum bid on the property. All taxes and special assessments upon the property paid by the purchaser subsequent to the sale, plus five percent (5%) per annum interest on those taxes and special assessments, will also be required to be paid to redeem such property.

In addition, IC 6-1.1-25-2 (e) states the total amount required for redemption may include the following costs incurred and paid by the purchaser or the purchaser's assignee or the county before redemption: (1) The attorney's fees and cost of giving notice under IC 6-1.1-25-4.5; (2) The costs of title search or examining and update the abstract of title for the tract or item of real property. The period of redemption shall expire on Monday, October 14, 2024 for certificates sold in the tax sale. For certificates struck to the county, the period of redemption may expire Friday, February 9, 2024.

If the tract or item of real property is sold for an amount more than the minimum bid and the property is not redeemed, the owner of record of the property who is divested of ownership at the time the tax deed is issued may have a right to the tax sale surplus. The Auditor and Treasurer specifically reserve the right to withhold from the sale any parcel which has been listed in error, or which otherwise becomes ineligible for sale either prior to 10/12/2023 or during the duration of the sale. This notice of real property tax sale, and the tax sale itself are undertaken and will be conducted pursuant to the requirements of the laws of the State of Indiana which regulate the sale of land for delinquent taxes, pursuant to I.C. 6-1.1-24-1 et seq. The County does not warrant the accuracy of the street address or common description of the property, and a misstatement in the key number or street address does not invalidate an otherwise valid sale. Minimum bid amounts are prescribed by law and are subject to change prior to the auction date.

Pursuant to IC 6-1.1-24-3(e), property descriptions may be omitted for properties appearing on the certified list in consecutive years. A complete property list may be obtained at www.sriservices.com or in an alternative form upon request. Registration For Bidding On The Tax Sale:

weaving looms and more on the performance floor of the Indiana Arts Building.

Beginning at 10 a.m., the youth had four hours, until 2:30 p.m. (with a 30-minute break for lunch) to make a scarf in this annual Sheep to Shawl contest, with judging and an auction of the scarves following.

To make a scarf, the youth volunteers do everything from carding a fleece, which is preparing it for spinning, to spinning it on spinning wheels, to plying, which is twisting two strands of wool together, then weaving it.

While there were also two adult teams this year, all eyes were on the youth teams.

"I think the youth bring an element of pushing creative boundaries to the contest," said Sarah E. Morin, Conner Prairie's youth experience manager. Morin and Bill Freil, Conner Prairie's interpretation coordinator, oversee the youth and help run the contest.

"Early on, their pattern and colors much more closely mimicked what the adult teams were doing, just on a smaller scale," Morin said. The first years were all natural, undyed fibers. "The youth asked to bring more colors into it. They tried 'zebra-pling' (which is two different colors in the same strand of yarn), painting the finished scarf, adding feathers and beads," she said.

This year was the first year that anyone spun metallic fiber into the wool. "While this contest is very much about keeping a historic craft alive, it's equally about making it fun and relevant to the next generation of artists."

Morin remembers when she started working at Conner Prairie in 2003, and the competition started with one team. A second team was added the second year, a third team the next year and then a fourth team the next year.

"We've held steady at four teams since then, because that maxes out our equipment and time to prepare," Morin said. "A younger brother of a girl spinner joined early on, and convinced all his buddies to join. For a long time, we had a boys-only team. We still have boys, but we are co-ed."

The boys team at the fourth contest -- dressed as Pirates of the Treadle with costumes, swords and a scarf design that incorporated the black-and-white flag that pirates had -- really shook things up. "The crowd roared and loved it," Payne said. "That was history and tradition in the making."

Then the girls' teams immediately wanted to do themes and costumes. For the past several years, they did overall themes, with this year's theme being "Decades" with teams dressing through the decades.

These themes influence the teams' choice of scarf colors, pattern and displays, Morin said.

What do the youth learn from the Sheep to Shawl Contest?

"So many things," Morin said. "Leadership, math, chemistry, patience, project planning, how to handle pressure."

But this year, especially, they learned "teamwork" and that "every member is essential to success." The program offered youth who didn't have the chance to work in a team much during the pandemic years a valuable opportunity to do so, she said.

While there is a maximum of eight on a team, only six can compete at a time. The fastest spinners, the best weavers and plyers, and the very best carders compete with their team the entire time, while their teammates, if any more than six, rotate out.

Another aspect of the spinning program is doing outreaches with Fishers Arts Council, Hamilton County Artists' Association and Nickel Plate Arts, with spinner youth demonstrating at art fairs, fiber events, Hamilton County Ag Days and more. "The kids love it, and it expands the exposure of their skills and bulbs their confidence," Payne said.

The spinning program has been in place for the past 15 years. Payne has been spinning and weaving for 40 years and was fortunate to learn the craft from "incredible weavers" at Conner Prairie, where she has been a member of the textiles staff all of that time. The textiles staff makes the Conner Prairie textiles that are sold in the museum's gift shop.

"Sue Payne is awesome. She bends over backwards to help any youth who puts in a sincere effort to learn this craft, regardless of their beginning talent level," Morin said. "She has helped youth get into colleges and find their career path, and mentored them into graduating seniors ready to enter a successful adulthood."

Conner Prairie's youth volunteer spinning program got its start when six 12-year-old girls came to Payne asking to participate in the Sheep to Shawl competition at the State Fair. The State Fair judges were so impressed by the youth volunteers' work, a youth category was created.

"I will say the first six girls who also happened to be very strong at age 12 years old, put their hearts into that first contest, and I had no idea and never would have bet the program would turn into the amazing complex machine it has become," Payne said.

By the third year, there were 17 girls, and the beginnings of the mentoring by the more experienced youth were emerging, she said. "It almost seemed natural. We played 'Phantom of the Opera' at every practice and, when the teams were formed, the captains had little stuffed sheep as their mascots and named them after the main characters. They would work for hours, take breaks and it was almost magical."

While teaching the kids how to spin and weave, Payne said learning how to take apart a spinning wheel and change a bobbin quickly and accurately was a major need. At the start of the third contest, "my wheel won't work" was heard, she said, like "chirping birds." So now, in practice sessions, when a youth says, "My wheel won't work," Payne calls out "teaching moment," and all of the youth volunteers come over and try to diagnose.

"It's very exciting just to see all of that energy and everything to get done in that four-hour time period," Morin said.

"Conner Prairie and the Youth Spinning Program particularly is fortunate to have generous people supporting us through monetary donations, purchase of scarves at the State Fair auction, donation of fleeces and wheels, and grants supporting instructional trainings," said Morin. We are grateful to the Indiana Sheep Association in particular for their longstanding support of the Sheep to Shawl contest.

The youth spinning program is part of the larger Conner Prairie Youth Volunteer Program in which youth volunteer on the historic grounds, in modern clothes and costume, interacting with the public and leading hands-on activities. The 2024 program is open for youth who will be 10 years old by April 1, with applications available in early October at www.connerprairie.org.

ed in the opposite direction at about 60 mph. I have no doubt the expression on his face mirrored the one the DL saw when she took her glasses off.

He still opens kitchen cabinets when he's bored, but to this day he has never, EVER again touched the one where the boogeyman lives.

Another expression Arie frequently sports is what my friend, Jerry Snyder, used to call his "gorilla look." Loosely translated it means "I don't approve of you and/or what is going on here. Don't make me do something about it." He's big enough grown men have been known to think twice when they see that look.

He wasn't even a year old when I had a new mattress delivered. As the two delivery guys started out with the old mattress

I heard "Uh, Ma'am?" in the tone you might expect of someone confronted with a growling Doberman.

There was no Doberman — just Arie, blocking their exit. Nobody was going to take anything out of HIS house.

There, I feel better already — and I haven't even gotten around to my Chloe stories!

Note: Paula Dunn is taking a vacation break this week. This column originally ran in the Times in December, 2010. Arie and Chloe have since crossed over the Rainbow Bridge, but their exploits live on!
