Three Things You Should Know

Attorney General Todd Rokita invites Hoosiers to IndianaUnclaimed.gov to see if they have any money waiting for them this spring. After decimating the prior record set in 2014, Attorney General Ŕokita's office returned over $81 million in unclaimed property to its rightful owners in 2023. Over $1.5 MILLION is returned to Hoosiers every week, and hundreds of millions are just waiting to be claimed. And it seems appropriate at this time in March that some property owners in the Unclaimed Property Division's database include such holidayappropriate first or last names of Ireland, Gold, Clover, Shamrock, and

Speaking of Rokita had some strong words regarding Hoosier lawmakrers: "As I have stated throughout the debate on this antisemitism bill, the law was originally written to protect Jewish students in Indiana K-12 schools and university campuses from ruthless, anti-Semitic attacks that have increased since the horrific slaughter of Israelis on Oct. 7. Indiana Senators turned it into a toothless mess that allows anti-Semites to continue to cloak their discriminatory hatred of Jews as simple political disagreements directed at Israel, not Jews. Then. Indiana Representatives would not correct the Senate's actions, which equates hateful, anti-Semitic rhetoric, like "From the River to the Sea" to mere political speech. The Governor should veto this compromised bill to show he understands that regular Hoosiers won't compromise with Jewhating bigots."

As the winter heating season draws to a close, CenterPoint Energy is reminding customers that the State of Indiana's winter moratorium recently ended. The utility is taking proactive steps to support customers during this time and encourages them to contact us to discuss options. The Indiana winter moratorium protects customers who have applied for support through income-qualified programs, such as the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), from having their heating services interrupted. CenterPoint Energy has implemented a number of programs to provide continued support beyond the moratorium's end. The company reminds customers that some assistance programs are still available.

Drake Sterling sworn in as Carmel Chief of Police

Drake Sterling was officially sworn in as Carmel Chief of Police vesterday evening. The public ceremony, held at The Tarkington Theater, was led by Carmel Mayor Sue Finkam and open to all members of the Carmel community. In addition to the formal swearingin ceremony, Mayor Finkam also recognized retiring police chief Jim Barlow for his dedication to the city by awarding him the Range Line Pioneer Award.

"As our city welcomes Chief Sterling, I want to express my deepest gratitude to Chief Barlow for his years of dedicated service and unwavering commitment to ensuring the safety and well-being of our community," said Mayor Finkam. "The transition represents a new chapter for our police department, and I am confident that Chief Sterling will build upon the foundation laid by his predecessor, bringing fresh perspectives and innovative approaches to further strengthen the bond between law enforcement and the community we serve." Chief of Police Drake Sterling joined the Carmel Police Department in February 2024 after serving in various roles with the Zionsville Police Department. During his career, Chief Sterling served in a SWAT capacity for more than ten years as well as in Support Services, Investigations and Uniformed Services. "As I step into the role of chief of police, I am humbled and honored to serve this community. My commitment is to lead with transparency, accountability and a deep dedication to fostering positive relationships between our police force and the residents we protect," said Chief Sterling. "Together, we will work tirelessly to create a safer, more inclusive environment, where collaboration and communication are paramount."

Retiring Chief Jim Barlow served the Carmel Police Department for more than 40 years. Barlow started with late-night shifts in the patrol division then moved from criminal investigations to special investigations with Carmel Police's drug task force. During his career, Barlow saw promotions from sergeant to lieutenant to major. He served in leadership roles in the patrol division and the support division, ultimately appointed to chief of police in 2017. "It has been an honor to work alongside dedicated officers and witness the strength of our community partnerships. Together, we have faced challenges, celebrated successes and continually strived to make our city a safer place," said Chief Barlow. "The journey has been rewarding, and I am confident that the department will continue to thrive in its mission to protect and serve."

YUCK!

A Borrowed Plate

CARRIE CLASSON

husband, Peter, and I were surprised that two plates were missing. The Postscript

We stay in our little apartment in Mexico and, while we're gone, all our dishes and glasses remain in the cupboards. We pack away most of our spices, but we leave the vegetable steamer and the pressure cooker and all the art on the walls. We leave it all in the apartment which, we assume, is rented out to other people while we are gone, although it is hard to know for sure because everything is always right where we left it. But this time, two plates were missing. And I knew where they

Shortly before we left last year, a few weeks before Christmas, our wonderful landlord Jorge was chatting well into the evening with a woman about his age at a table in the courtyard. The woman looked a lot like him, and the way they were talking and laughing together led me to believe this was probably one of Jorge's 12 siblings.

"Would you like a piece of cake?" I asked them on the way to my apartment. I had just bought a cake, a chocolate one. (If it sounds as if I do nothing but eat cake and donuts and apple empanadas in Mexico, that would not be far from the truth.)

"Oh, no!" Jorge said, smiling. "I don't need any cake." But I could tell he wanted some.

"Oh, yes!" the woman, who was probably his sister, said. "I would love a piece of cake!"

So I brought two pieces of cake down on two small hand-painted plates I had bought at the market. A few days later, we returned to the U.S. for Christmas, and when we came back this winter, the two little plates were still missing.

I should note that this did not bother me at all. We still had two small plates, and Peter thought those plates were too small for cake anyway. He bought four more that were just as pretty and a little bigger, and that was the last I thought about our plates. Until last night.

Last night, Jorge knocked on our apartment door.

We are on the third story and Jorge is usually behind the front desk, or supervising the small kitchen downstairs, or spending a night in the little apartment on the ground floor, waiting for late arriving guests. But there he was at our door, holding our two plates.

"We have a tradition in Mexico," he told us, in English. "When you are given a plate with food, you must return it with a gift. This is what we do with our family and our friends."

On the plates were what appeared to be two enormous biscuits.

"These are... I'm not sure what the word is in English," he confessed. "But they are the best."

Jorge handed us the two plates. We thanked him, and he left. Then we immediately put honey on the large, tasty whole wheat biscuits and ate them up. Jorge was right. They were the best

As I washed up our two missing plates, I thought what a wonderful idea it was to return a borrowed plate with a gift. And I thought of what an honor it was to be considered Jorge's friend.

And I decided I needed to loan out more plates in the future—plates filled with whatever I have to offer, whatever I can give—knowing that, one way or another, the borrowed plate will be returned in some fashion, filled with something better than I could ever imagine.

some. Help is unwanted in my house. I try to give help, but Mary Ellen doesn't want

Do you need help? I'd like to give you

She is totally helpless.

This is of her own choosing. If you are confused by this, let me give you a few examples that might be helpful.

First, Mary Ellen is usually in the kitchen around six preparing dinner. I always ask, "Anything I can help with?" It's been more than 40 years since she could think of something that I would really be of any help doing. I sometimes say:" Is there anything you can help me, help you with." Nope. Nothing.

I'm also not allowed to do the taxes anymore. One year we were audited because I had taken a deduction for pizza delivery because I ate in my home office.

I am not allowed to load dishes in the dishwasher because Mary Ellen has this crazy idea that the cups, utensils and plates have their own special place in the machine.

But I am good at getting stubborn lids off cans and bottles. I like doing this because it makes me feel needed. Plus, I enjoy the beer.

On rare occasions, she requests that I go to the supermarket on my own, but she takes no chances with my ability to find exactly what she needs. Let's take one example.

"Dick, I need almond milk. I am sending you a text to remind you exactly what to get. It has to say UNSWEETENED; it has to say ALMOND BREEZE and it has to say ORIGINAL on the container. It can't say VANILLA. Now I am also going to send you a picture of the package so you can't possibly make a mistake."

I ask people shopping in the dairy department if they know where almond milk is and they just shrug. Apparently, these people drink something that comes from a cow's udder.

Finally, I did see a bottle of cashew milk, so I bought it.

"What did you buy, Dick? This is cashew milk. I don't like cashew milk?"

"I figured any nutty idea was as good as the next."

Once when Mary Ellen called me, she requested canned tomatoes and said she would text me a photo and description of exactly what she wanted. But when I got to the supermarket, my phone was dead. I wasn't taking any chances. I did not want to go back to the store. So, I got tomatoes every which way: Diced, as a sauce and a soup, stewed, crushed, whole peeled, quartered, sun dried and condensed. They were all wrong. I was back at the store an hour later. What the heck is tomato paste? At least, it doesn't sound as bad as Gorilla Glue.

Recently, Mary Ellen requested I stop and pick up, get ready for this, a container of egg whites.

"Mary Ellen, I'll never find something weird like that. I'll buy two dozen eggs and separate them myself."

"No, the package must say cage-free. It has to be 100% liquid, and it must be zero cholesterol."

I asked one of the clerks. "Do you sell egg whites?"

"Of course."

"Where should I look?"

"Inside our eggs."

Finally, later that day, Mary Ellen agreed she would extract the egg whites herself. This incident did cause some conflict between us. But we made up. Now only our eggs are going to be legally separated.

"Zero layer menus" grant swift access to functions.

Beyond all that wizardry, the EQE is awash in all of the sporty spiffiness expected in an AMG model. Red-stitched leather and suede cover the seats, steering wheel, and doors while carbon fiber and aluminum zone automatic climate control and Bermester 3D audio add divine comforts. Tap the power hatch to open up a roomy cargo hold that holds its own with the old wagons.

Hodgman's wagon rockets from 0-60 mph in 5 seconds and on to a top speed of 176 mph. A Corvette from the era took an additional second to hit 60 and fell 20 mph short on top speed. If you wanted to flash your family from Stuttgart to Munich toot sweet, this was your whip.

The EQE would embarrass that classic AMG in all but top speed. Its electric powertrain with allwheel-drive delivers 617 horsepower and 0-60 mph in just 3.4 seconds. Top speed for AMG models is limited to a gentlemanly 149 mph so as not to run the battery dry running to McDonald's and back. It can charge 10-80% on a DC fast charger in 32 minutes, but will take closer to 11 hours on a home charger. Range is rated 235 miles, provided you're not towing the maximum 4,000 lbs.

Driving The Sublime.

Nothing drives like a powerful Mercedes from the '80s, suspended on stiff iron sponges, but the EQE is a starship by comparison.Its air suspension can be adjusted from wafting comfort to brutal cornering. Performance is further enhanced a raft of crash avoidance systems that include adaptive cruise, automatic lane changing, automatic emergency braking, and exit warning. Driver's view vitals through a picture-size head-up display that appears to hover feet in front of the car. Maneuvering in tight downtown spaces is a dream with rear steering.

I make a big deal about the EQE's performance, but it's also a very pleasant vehicle to drive everyday. It can crush you kids' backpacks when driven hard, but it can also carry them in cosseting comfort as gently as a mother's kitten. And, it does it all with style and tech unimaginable when Hammers ruled highways.

The Mercedes-AMG EQE SUV starts at $109,300, rising to our car's $130,850 - a "bargain" compared to what Hodgman's car cost new. Others to consider include the Tesla Model X, Cadillac Lyriq, Audi Q8 e-tron, and BMW iX M60.

All Hamilton

County churches and faith-based organizations are encouraged to be represented and engage in this extended discussion with guest speakers and expert panel members on challenging topics impacting our community.

The ability "to bring together Hamilton County residents and especially the interfaith community to increase awareness and engagement with an eventual outcome of being prepared during a devastating disaster or emergency," Chance said, is really "a return to the grassroots of being a caring community."

Chance also said, "the Event Sponsors, Gaylor Electric - Chuck Goodrich, Good Samaritan Network of Hamilton County, Inc., and Victoria Spartz, are crucial in making this FREE event possible for Hamilton County, and they deserve our support for taking on this unique event!"

The Keynote Guest Speaker is Judge Steven Nation. Judge Nation, a native of Beech Grove, graduated from Cathedral High School and earned a Bachelor's degree in

Indiana's Severe Weather Requires Plan of Action

In the months of February. March, April and May, Hoosiers know to expect all kinds of weather. From snow and ice to thunderstorms and tornadoes, Indiana experiences a wide range of weather.

That is why Indiana Gov. Eric

J. Holcomb proclaimed March 10-16 as Severe Weather Preparedness Week. The Indiana Department of Homeland Security collaborates with the National Weather Service during Severe Weather Preparedness Week to educate Hoosiers about the possibility of severe weather and remind them that they are their own first line of defense when protecting their families and communities.

We experience severe weather frequently, but we cannot overlook how we prepare for these storms. Check in with your family members, make sure they know what to do and when to do it if a storm approaches," said IDHS Emergency Management and Preparedness Director Mary Moran.

IDHS encourages all families, schools and workplaces to make tornado safety plans. Hopefully, Hoosiers practiced these plans during the statewide tornado drill Tuesday. The drill was broadcasted as an Emergency Alert System on television and radio.

Throughout this week, IDHS will share severe weather safety tips on Facebook, X (formerly known as Twitter) and Instagram. Follow IDHS and use the hashtags #SevereWx and #SWPW.

THE TIMES

Spring into Conservation with Native Plants and Rain Barrels

Spring rains, sunshine, and blooms are on the horizon. Plan ahead for your property by ordering your native plants and rain barrels from the soil and water conservation district. The SWCD has all the tools you need to conserve water and support pollinators like bees and butterflies with beautiful native plants.

Native plant kits allow you to take the guesswork out of plant selection by providing a set of plants that will be perfect for your yard. Each native plant kit contains 50 native plant plugs for $135. There is a kit for all areas of your yard including pollinator, rain (for wetter areas), shade and prairie grass.

Rain barrels are also available for pre-order for $85. These repurposed barrels capture rainwater from your downspout and roof and hold it for use at a later time. Rain barrel water is great for watering plants and gardens or even washing the car. In peak summer months, a rain barrel can save around 1,300 gallons of free, naturally soft water for your use. Pre-pay for your barrel and choose between grey, black, and terra cotta fifty-five-gallon rain barrels. Accessories like diverters systems for easily installation, wooden stands, and linking hoses are also available.

Plant kit and rain barrel

pre-orders can be placed online at www.hamiltonswcd.org. Orders for plants are due March 28th and rain barrel pre-orders are due May 16th. Rain barrels can be picked up May 22 in Noblesville and plants the week of June 4th. All proceeds support conservation projects and education in Hamilton County. Carmel residents are eligible for a $50-$75 rebate from the City Stormwater Program after installing a rain barrel. Information on this program is available here: https://www.rainonmain.co m/carmel-rain-barrelsubsidy.html

More information on native plants and rain barrels can be found on the Hamilton County SWCD website (http://www.hamiltonswcd. org).
