Whether the Red Cross or Versiti, officials are explaining that blood supplies are critical. Did you know that collecting blood has become increasingly challenging. According to our friends at Versiti, only about 3 percent of the population donates blood, yet nearly 70 percent of people will need blood in their lifetime. Every successful blood drive matters more than ever, and your efforts truly make a difference for patients and families in our community. Versiti is currently booking the 2026 schedule and are in urgent need of additional blood drives during the winter months, when donations are traditionally lowest. If you are interested in having a blood drive, please reach out Jennie Bean at jbean@versiti.org

■ ADOPT A PET TOAST

Toast has a face you just can't say no to! This 1-year-old, male Labrador Retriever mix has been available for adoption at the Humane Society for Hamilton County (HSHC) since 3/16/26. This playful guy is bursting with energy, and he loves getting pets, sniffing around, and of course, playing with his toys. To meet Toast, please fill out an adoption application at hamiltonhumane.com/adopt to set up a meet and greet.

Property taxes are due today. It always makes me so happy to write that check for a house that needs work while seeing government buildings all new and sparkly. So happy.

Let's Take a Trip Into the Twilight Zone BY THE NUMBERS

By The Numbers, a look at what's in the news . . . by the numbers. These are just numbers, not suggestions that they mean more or less than what they are. We do not suggest that one number is connected to another. These are simply facts with no extraneous details, bias or slanted reporting. To borrow (and perhaps mangle a bit) a quote from legendary fictional detective Joe Friday, it's just the numbers, ma'am!

Imagine if you will another dimension, another time. You're traveling through another dimension – a dimension not only of sight and sound but of mind. A journey into a wondrous land whose boundaries are that of imagination. That's a signpost up ahead: your next stop: the Twilight Zone! And believe it or not, today, May 11, is a day when we can wander back into that old dimension. It's a day where we can remember Rod Serling, standing in living black-and-white on our small screens in our living room every Friday night. Yes friends, today, is that day to remember, a day when we can wander into the Twilight Zone . . . by the numbers!

There appears to be a day for everything and May 11 is Twilight Zone Day. We're not sure why, but we sure enjoy the trip into another time and dimension!

10-2-59

It was a Friday and CBS premiered a new show that featured a man with dark hair, dark eyebrows and a cigarette in his hand. Rod Serling introduced us all to the beginning of a five season run that ended in 1964.

39

Serling was 39-years-old when the show debuted. As a child, he loved to listen to radio, especially some of the old drama and thriller shows. He graduated from Binghamton Central High School in New York.

1943

The day after his high school graduation, Serling chose to enlist in the U.S. Army rather than go to college. He ended up serving in the 511th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

64

Serling was only 64 inches tall – five foot four.

17

He may have been small, but he had 17 boxing bouts, competing as a flyweight.

156

The number of episodes of the Twilight Zone, running from Oct. 2, 1959 to June 19, 1964.

25

Each episode was approximately 25 minutes in length. However, season four of five expanded to one hour.

3

The Twilight Zone has had three remakes – taking place in 1985, 2002 and 2019.

92

Of the 156 episodes, Serling wrote more than half – 92 – of them.

■ THREE THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW

1. Indiana Governor Mike Braun joined Eli Lilly and Company recently to celebrate a major expansion at the company's Lebanon campus, including the opening of Lilly Lebanon Advanced Therapies – its first dedicated genetic medicine manufacturing facility – and additional investments across its Indiana operations. Lilly's latest commitment brings its total planned capital investments in Indiana to more than $21 billion since 2020, further solidifying the state's position as a global leader in life sciences, advanced manufacturing and innovation. This builds on Gov. Braun's recent announcement of a $1 billion, 10-year life sciences initiative focused on creating 100,000 new jobs within plant, animal and human health. The Lebanon site, located within the state's LEAP Innovation District, plays a central role in Indiana's strategy to grow next-generation industries and attract transformational investment. Lilly Lebanon Advanced Therapies will support both clinical and commercial production of advanced medicines, including genetic therapies designed to address disease at its source.

2. ParaPsyCon 7, a massive Paranormal and Psychic Convention, is slated for May 15-17 in Mansfield, Ohio's famed Ohio State Reformatory. OSR gained international notoriety 30 years ago starring as Shawshank Prison and continues to grow in popularity. The site for countless hauntings, apparitions and paranormal investigations, the prison is cited as "most haunted" and "scariest places" in America by the Travel Channel and other sources. Wall-to-wall psychics, paranormal teams, celebrities, Bigfoot and cryptid researchers, UFO investigators, authors, healers and vendors offering stones, crystals, jewelry, tarot and more will fill ParaPsyCon 7. Q&A panels and speakers present on topics ranging from cryptids and UFOs to wraiths, hauntings, psychics and mediums and other mysteries of the paranormal and unexplained. Details and event tickets are available at Parapsycon.com

3. As the Indianapolis International Airport puts a strong spring-break travel period in its rearview mirror, it is now looking ahead to welcoming fans from around the world to the greatest spectacle in racing, and gearing up for a summer packed with new routes, a new airline, more flights and heavy passenger travel. The airport had 403,000 passengers fly through the Indy airport during spring break 2026 and March 2026 was the second-highest capacity month in IND's history. The terminal is now decked out and ready to welcome hundreds of thousands of fans from across the country and around the world for the Indianapolis 500 race.

Andy Takes Us Back for International Nurses Day

ANDY CHANDLER
 Columnist

At the time of this publishing, tomorrow, May 12th is International Nurses Day.

Working in the archives at a museum dedicated to a reporter who documented people's daily lives, it's easier to discuss a specific government program, time, or issue through the eyes of someone who experienced it.

Most people come to museums expecting to see a collection of artifacts. Among the many time period pieces, are items that make the visitor pause and reflect. In many ways, a museum is a collection of biographies.

At the Ernie Pyle WWII Museum in Dana, the archives have one such biography: a 1944 Cadet Nurse Corp (CNC) blouse donated on behalf of Ms. Betty Williams, one of the first women to participate in a government program to train nurses during World War II (WWII).

Betty Lou Williams was born in Indianapolis in 1926. During her infancy, her family moved to a farm in Odon, IN, a town west of what is now Crane Naval Center. She spent her childhood in school, helping with farm chores and raising her dog, Spitz. She graduated from Odon-Madison High School in 1944.

It's hard to fathom that during the US involvement in WWII the American war effort, the US went from 100,000 people in uniform, to over sixteen million. During the five years of CNC's existence, more nurses were pinned than there were military service members prior to 1941.

We can learn a lot about Betty as a person based on the CNC requirements. Candidates were to be between 17-35 years of age, of good moral character, fit and have good grades.

Motivations varied, but in many interviews later conducted by Case Western University, women in the program cited that the chance to wear a uniform, free college, free tuition room and board, a chance to make more than being an office clerk and a desire to help people, as main motivators.

One feature of Ohio Senator Frances Bolton's 1943 Nurse Training Senate Bill was the prohibition against racial discrimination. CNC was five years ahead of the formal armed forces' integration. While numbers are not fully known, Case Western University, in the same study, estimated four thousand minorities were pinned over five years.

Betty was trained through Union Hospital's program in Terre Haute under the watchful eye of Bessie Small. The collection of ID cards and photographs from that time have been a godsend to archivists. She completed the program with top grades.

Eventually, she went on to a career in rural medicine starting in Odon and then went to work at IU Medical for cancer research and treatment. She married and had a family. It was her daughter Lisa Hall, who donated the artifacts to the Pyle Museum where eventually they will be on display this summer.

Recently, during a visit to the Ernie Pyle WWII Museum by Governor Mike Braun, Ms. Williams' nurses' blouse was put out on display. Even Gov. Braun didn't realize Union Hospital had such a program. When I asked how her mother might feel with the Governor learning ered active duty military and eligible for VA benefits including the famous white gravestone, and burial in Arlington.

As a post-script to this article: in researching this program I discovered that in December of 2025, a federal law was signed designating nurses who served in the CNC during 1943-1948 and discharged honorably, to be consid-

2026 SUBARU OUTBACK XT IS THE SUPER COMFY ALL-TERRAIN TURBO WAGON THAT ELICITS NOSTALGIA OF VOLVOS PAST

Better than a Lamborghini toting a trailer, it takes kids to school and families on adventures

CASEY WILLIAMS
Columnist

One of my favorite cars from the late 1980s/90s is the Volvo 740 Turbo Wagon, a car once compared in advertising to a Lamborghini Countach hitching a trailer. For the time, it was fast, luxurious, and innately practical. It was understated and durable. Which, brings me to the car I'm driving this week: The redesigned 2026 Subaru Outback Limited XT.

That XT is the important part as this Outback turbo has nearly a hundred horsepower over the old brick-square Volvo and can run 0-60 mph in about 2 seconds less – not quite as fast as the V-12-powered Countach, but nipping the bumpers of late-80s Corvettes. Imagine an all-road WRX rally car with a cavernous trunk and penchant for off-grid camping.

By the numbers, the Outback's 2.4-liter turbo-charged four-cylinder engine conjures 260 horsepower and 277 lb.-ft. of torque – all routed to the standard all-wheel-drive system through a continuously variable transmission. I don't love CVTs, which are pretty revvy in non-turbo models, but are more subdued under a turbo's torque. Shift through eight pre-set gear ratios with paddles for a more natural feel. Fuel economy is pretty frugal for a tall turbo wagon at 21/29-MPG city/highway.

I suspect nobody will complain about the Outback XT's performance on- or off-road, but the new fit is certainly gaining controversy. As Subaru discontinued the similar Legacy sedan, it had the opportunity to endow the Outback with more SUV style. That means a taller grille, squared body that would make a classic Volvo jealous, and liberal application of black plastic. Our Limited includes 19-inch black wheels, 8.7

inches of ground clearance and a roof rack rated for 800 lbs. of static load – enough to loft a pop-up tent sheltering a couple of campers.

Far less controversial is the new interior fronting a 12.1-inch infotainment screen with crisp graphics, quick start-up, and intuitive controls. Drivers get a fully digital instrument cluster. Harman Kardon audio provides sound the Outback deserves – as do wireless Apple CarPlay, Android Auto and console phone charging. Heated seats and steering wheel, dual-zone automatic climate control and sweet bovine leather upped the luxury. Enjoy the power moonroof on spring days and summer nights.

Much of the new Outback's underlying architecture is shared with the previous generation. Passengers slide in slightly higher, but the view over the hood and windshield rake are more wagon than SUV. Outback fans can stand down; it's still a wagon whether its sleek or looks like a Volvo had relations with a Land Rover.

Being a Subaru, safety is still paramount. Beyond its body structure that's expected to ace crash tests, active tech includes the automaker's three-camera EyeSight system to enable adaptive cruise, automatic emergency braking, lane keep assist, and lane-centering steering. It also employs blind spot warning, rear auto brake, and emergency evasive steering assist. I'd like it even better with a head-up display and hands-off cruising.

I've owned two previous-generation Outbacks, including our current 2022 Outback Wilderness with the turbo. There's also a 1989 Corvette in my garage. The Corvette will out-run the Outback at top end, but will not get away from it 0-60 mph. The Outback XT is a seriously quick car that just happens to be an excellent family wagon no matter the trails you roam.

The Outback's price has been steadily rising, now starting at just under $35,000. Our Limited with turbo and trimmings comes to $45,815. Inflation adjusted, the old Volvo started at $70,079 – or about a $25,000 discount with an extra hundred horsepower, fortified all-road capability and famous durability. Today's competitors include the Ford Bronco Sport, Nissan Rogue, Toyota RAV4 and Volvo XC60.

County Courts Host Drug Treatment Court Graduation

Hamilton County's Drug Treatment Court recognized four graduates during a ceremony held Thursday afternoon in the Historic Courthouse courtroom. The program provides a treatment-based alternative for nonviolent offenders working to overcome substance use disorder.

Among the graduates was Kimber Osborne, who has been sober since August 27, 2024. Osborne began using opiates as a teenager and spent years navigating addiction and multiple treatment attempts. After relapsing during the pandemic and facing three arrests in three months, she entered the program ready for change.

"I was scared in the beginning – it was so hard," says Osborne. "But I needed the structure and accountability. This program, along with my sponsor and support system, helped me surrender and truly commit to recovery."

Osborne is now working, pursuing an MBA in Business at Indiana Wesleyan University, and plans to continue participating in recovery groups.

Jason Landers also graduated after achieving sobriety in August 2024 following his arrest two months prior. Landers describes his life before entering the program as chaotic and isolating, marked by substance use that led to legal trouble and instability.

"When I was arrested, I actually felt relieved," Landers says. "I had no hope and no way out. This program gave me a chance when I didn't think I'd get one."

Landers embraced the program's structure, committing fully to therapy, meetings, and personal growth. Early morning meetings helped him connect with others in recovery, and today, he continues to stay involved in the recovery community, serving as a sponsor.

"You have to be willing to change your whole mindset," Landers says. "This isn't just about getting out of legal trouble. It's about changing your life."

Participants in Drug Treatment Court commit to intensive supervision, substance use treatment, random drug testing, home visits, and education or employment requirements. The program typically takes 18 to 24 months to complete and is designed to support long-term recovery.

"The graduates' success reflects their commitment to change and the effectiveness of the program," said Superior Court Judge David Najjar, who oversees the program. "This program truly helps individuals rebuild their lives."

Dick's Little Experiment

DICK WOLFSIE
Columnist

I don't want Mary Ellen and me to end up like our friends the Rodmans, who, up until their 40th wedding anniversary, couldn't keep their mitts off each other, but after returning from celebrating in the Bahamas, they sued each other for divorce. They were so happy they didn't realize how miserable they were. My diagnosis was that they had not been upfront and honest about their annoying behaviors.

"I have an idea," I told my wife. "This evening, I'll act out all your bad habits, and you can act out all mine. That way, we'll both get a clearer picture of how much we annoy each other. It will add a little spice to our relationship and reveal which irritating actions we need to work on."

I jotted down a few of Mary Ellen's little idiosyncrasies. I didn't want to overdo it, knowing how challenging it would be for my wife to compile a comparable list. I'm very much the perfect husband.

That night, after I returned from playing pickleball, Mary Ellen walked in from a church meeting. It was her turn to be me. She began by not shutting the door behind her, letting every fly and bug get into the house. She also tracked a lot of mud in on her shoes, but she wiped her feet on the throw rug. Hmm, she was off to a good start.

Then she popped open a can of beer and guzzled it. She wiped the beer that ran down her chin with her sleeve. After turning on the bedroom TV, she clicked on the living room TV so we could hear both sets blaring at once. Then, to nail me on my most annoying habit, she searched every room in the house, pretending she had lost her cell phone. I hated to admit it, but she was me all over.

Now it was my turn to be Mary Ellen. First, I took all the dirty plates and glasses I had left in the sink and put them in the dishwasher, but not before I rearranged the dirty utensils and put them in the proper compartments. Then I turned off all the lights throughout the house that I had left on all day. Next, I swept up all the crumbs on the floor that some slob (me) had forgotten to clean up. I also wiped down the counter because someone hadn't cleaned up the orange juice he spilled. Yes, my wife has a lot of annoying habits, mostly cleaning up after me.

I asked Mary Ellen if she was okay with my little experiment. "Oh, yes," she said. "Let's do it again next week."

Emaciated Dog Found in Trash; Reward Offered

Humane World for Animals, formerly called the Humane Society of the United States, is offering a reward of up to $5,000 for information leading to the identification and arrest of the person or persons responsible for abandoning an emaciated dog in a trash can.

The Boone County Sheriff's Office gave the following account: On the evening of April 20, a homeowner found an emaciated female shepherd mix abandoned in their trash can. The trash can was situated at the end of their driveway along 200 E in Lebanon. The dog, named "Prim" by authorities, survived and is now in a foster home.

Securing the serious attention and engagement of law enforcement, prosecutors and residents in cases involving allegations of cruelty to animals is an essential step in protecting the whole community. The connection between animal cruelty and human violence is well documented. Studies show a correlation between animal cruelty and many other crimes, from narcotics and firearms violations to battery and sexual assault.

"Allowing a dog to decline into such a poor body condition and then leaving her for dead in a trash can is a heartbreakingly cruel crime," said Samantha Chapman, Indiana state director, Humane World for Animals. "We hope our reward offering helps find the person or persons responsible for this despicable act."

The Boone County Sheriff's Office is investigating this case. Anyone with relevant information is asked to call Boone County dispatch at (765) 482-1412 and select option 4 to provide a tip.

Humane World for Animals' Animal Cruelty Campaign raises public awareness and educates communities about the connection between animal cruelty and human violence while providing a variety of resources and support to law enforcement agencies, social work professionals, educators, legislators and families. We offer rewards in animal cruelty cases across the country and work to strengthen laws against animal cruelty.

Save A Life - Be Aware: May Motorcycle Safety Month

Governor Mike Braun has proclaimed May as Motorcycle Safety and Awareness Month in Indiana, joining a nationwide campaign by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. With riding season underway, this annual observance serves as an important reminder that safety on our roadways is a shared responsibility.

As temperatures rise and traffic increases, so does the presence of motorcycles on Hoosier roads. For many riders, this marks a return after months off the bike. May presents the ideal time to remind motorists to look for motorcyclists, as well as offer tips for riders who have been inactive since last fall and could be a bit rusty.

Motorcycle crashes continue to have devastating consequences across our state. Behind every incident is a person, a family, friends, and communities left to cope with the loss. These are not isolated events. They are preventable tragedies that demand our collective attention.

A large percentage of multi-vehicle motorcycle crashes occur when a driver fails to recognize a motorcycle in traffic, often turning into or pulling out in front of a rider. It is not enough to simply glance. Motorists must actively look for motorcycles and account for them in every driving decision. The proliferation of Automated Driving Systems that do not yet accurately detect motorcycles compounds this issue. At the same time, riders must take personal responsibility by riding within their abilities, maintaining control, and staying alert to the actions of others.

Training and proper licensing continue to play a critical role in rider safety. Motorcyclists who invest in professional instruction and ongoing skill development are significantly better equipped to handle real-world riding situations. Experience matters, but so does preparation.

ABATE of Indiana encourages all riders to make safety a priority this season: get trained, get licensed, practice regularly, and ride defensively. Motorists are urged to slow down, eliminate distractions, allow additional space, and treat motorcycles with the same respect as any other road user.

Motorcycle Safety and Awareness Month is not just about awareness; it's about awareness in action. Every decision made behind the wheel or on the handlebars has the potential to save a life.

"Save a Life - Be Aware - Motorcycles Are Everywhere."

2 Hoosier National Guard Soldiers Shine

Two Indiana National Guard soldiers scored big at a Midwest regional competition held at Fort Custer Training Center, near Augusta, Michigan, from April 30 to May 2. Sgt. Brendan Bartlett and Spc. Caleb Chambers, who won Indiana's statewide competition in March at Camp Atterbury, competed against Guardsmen from Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Chambers took top honors for junior-enlisted soldiers, and Bartlett placed second among noncommissioned officers. Together they won the state team award with overall combined score that bested the other states.

"I love the competition, spirit and everyone just cheering each other on," said Chambers after earning the top spot and an infantryman with 1st Battalion, 151st Infantry Regiment.

The 14 National Guardsmen faced off in several events testing their soldier skills, physical fitness, mental fortitude and overall resilience.

Over the three days, events included firing multiple weapons systems — M4 carbine, M17 pistol, M240 machine gun, a day-to-night land navigation course, an obstacle course, a water survival insertion, an appearance board, a 12-mile road march and the Army Expert Fitness Test. Additional tests included evaluating injuries on mock casualties, firing a Claymore mine and assembling three weapon systems under time constraints.

Preparing for the grueling competition took many hours of work, dedication and discipline that was also a point of pride for the Hoosier soldiers.

"It's an opportunity to show the best the Guard has to offer, and I am extremely proud of the type of soldiers we have in Indiana," said Chambers who took part in shooting competitions and hit the gym in preparation for the Best Warrior Competitions.

Chambers, who works at a factory when not wearing a U.S. Army uniform, said it's also pride in serving the country is how he manages two careers.

"I truly enjoy what I do here," said Chambers while on a Camp Atterbury range training for the regional competition. "I put in effort wherever I am. It's a constant effort."

For Bartlett, a 147th Cyber Warfare Company cyber operations specialist, part of the motivation that drove him is his love of the Hoosier state.

"Competing in the regional competition to me, it just means being with the best of the best within the regionals," said Bartlett at the Camp Atterbury training. "Personally, I feel like it's an honor. I love Indiana. I went to school here. I lived here for most of my life, and I am just very happy to have the honor of being the Indiana representative and NCO of the year."

Bartlett said that preparation helped him meet the moment.

"For regionals, I am ensuring that I am fit, mentally sharp," said

Bartlett. "Really this entire week, pre train-up is the biggest thing and having the option to shoot, hit the obstacle course, land navigation course, all the Army warrior tasks, just ensuring I am prepared as I possibly can be."

While the preparation helped during the three-day challenge, Bartlett finished second among noncommissioned officers. Yet, he enjoyed the experience of the Midwest competition.

"I felt great. I mean I was tried and sore, but the entire time I was having a great time," said Bartlett following the regional awards ceremony. "I enjoyed the entire thing. It was a fantastic opportunity."

Though Bartlett had a great time, he had mixed emotions about not joining his Hoosier compatriot on the top spot.

"It's more like a bitter-sweet feeling right now," said Bartlett. "I really wanted first, obviously, but you know I am so very happy with what I've accomplished here, and what I've done here. I'm very happy overall."

As the runner-up, Bartlett will be on the bench so to speak should the first place NCO, Staff Sgt. Logan Pasker of the Iowa National Guard, fall off. Chambers will go on to the national-level Best Warrior Competition slated for July in Florida.

"I'm pumped, I'm excited for going onto nationals. I'm proud to represent Indiana. Just loving the whole feeling right now," said Chambers.

I Know They Belong Together

CARRIE CLASSON
The Postscript

Three years ago, I was in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico, walking through what had once been a large fabric mill. It has since been turned into an art gallery called, appropriately, La Fabrica, where artists of all kinds lease space to show their work. There are always people and art and dogs, and flowers blooming and banners flying, making this former mill one of the liveliest places in town.

One day, while passing a shop, I saw the most outrageous couch.

It was an old camelback couch—a loveseat, really, but with wide, rolled arms. It appeared to be an older piece of furniture that had been restored. The fabric was crazy. It was a patchwork of burned velvet fabric in brilliant hues. It was the brightest, craziest couch I'd ever seen, and it was being sold alongside art and sculpture, which made sense, because it really was a work of art.

I don't know how stories come into being, but that brilliant couch, three years ago, left an impression on me.

I started writing a new book. The book was about a house that had lived in a small town by the river for 150 years and had, over the course of time, developed a fondness for the women who lived in it, especially its current tenant, Max. "What did Max do?" I wondered. And then I saw her making a couch very much like that one I'd seen, using crazy fabrics, and selling it to her art dealer, Bobby.

The story became "The Turnip House." When it was finished, I sent it to my agent and, after editing it, we submitted it to my publisher. And we have just learned that they want to publish it.

Last week, my husband, Peter, and I were considering moving from our tiny and much-beloved apartment at Casa de los Soles. We decided not to move. We realized we could not stand to be away from this place that has become our home away from home. Since we are not spending money on a larger apartment, I was walking through La Fabrica, wondering how we could make our place a little nicer. Just as I was thinking this, I saw a couch very similar to the one that had inspired "The Turnip House," the book that had just sold.

I went into the shop. "You had another couch," I began, "but it was in brighter colors."

The young woman did not look perplexed in the least. She headed off to the back of the store and indicated that I should follow her.

"No way," I thought.

We climbed a flight of stairs. And there, sitting like it was waiting for me, was my couch. Except now, it was 40% off.

"Oh my gosh," I said in English.

I came home and told Peter.

"If you like it, that's all that matters," Peter said. (Peter is wonderful that way.)

Then I asked Jorge, our landlord, if he'd mind if I replaced his couch with a new one. At first, he thought I was asking him to buy it.

"No! No," I told him. "It's a gift—to me." And I told him the story.

Jorge smiled. "No problem!"

So today I am waiting. I should be getting the final contract for "The Turnip House," which will make it all official. And I should be getting delivery of the brightly colored couch that inspired it. I'm not sure which will arrive first, and I guess it doesn't matter. I know they belong together and are part of the same story.

Till next time,

Carrie

CenterPoint Steps Up For U.S. Veterans

In celebration of the upcoming 250th anniversary of the United States of America, the CenterPoint Energy Foundation is launching a new and unique grant opportunity to support nonprofit organizations that serve and focus on our U.S. veterans in CenterPoint Energy's four state service area in Indiana, Minnesota, Ohio and Texas.

Through this special grant opportunity, the Foundation plans to invest up to $250,000 in the states the company serves, with individual grants ranging from $5,000 to $25,000. Grants will be awarded to eligible nonprofit organizations with a primary location within CenterPoint's service areas and whose programs support veterans and individuals connected to the military.

"As our nation approaches its 250th anniversary, this grant opportunity reflects our deep respect for the men and women who serve and have served, and our privilege to support them beyond their time in uniform," said Jason Ryan, Executive Vice President, Regulatory Services and Government Affairs at CenterPoint and United States Navy veteran.

"We see the value every day of our veteran workforce. We have more than 700 employees who once served in uniform and who are today working to deliver safe and reliable energy services to nearly 7 million customers. Through the CenterPoint Energy Foundation, we appreciate being able to give back to veterans by supporting nonprofit organizations that provide critical resources for mental health, housing stability and everyday needs. It's an honor to invest in programs that help veterans and their families thrive in the communities we are proud to serve," Ryan added.

Grant funding will focus on nonprofit programs working to strengthen veteran resilience through:

- Mental health and peer support services.
- Transitional and stable housing assistance.
- Daily living support, including transportation, benefits navigation and basic needs.

Funded separately and financially independent from the utility, the CenterPoint Energy Foundation strives to be a catalyst for good by leveraging everyday opportunities and resources to strengthen communities. This grant opportunity for veteran-serving organizations expands on the Foundation's two main strategic giving areas of community vitality and education to help address critical challenges facing veterans and their families.

CenterPoint employs more than 700 veterans across its four-state service area, who continue their commitment to service by strengthening the communities where they live and work by helping provide vital electric and natural gas service.

In 2025, the CenterPoint Energy Foundation awarded more than $15 million to support nonprofit organizations focused on increasing community vitality and investing in education.

Hamilton Heights' senior Jackson Cantlon has signed a letter of intent to join the Grace College Lancers' Track & Field Team in Winona Lake, Indiana.

Heights' Senior Signs With Lancers' Track & Field

Hamilton Heights' senior Jackson Cantlon has signed a letter of intent to join the Grace College Lancers' Track & Field Team this fall. Grace College, located in Winona Lake, Ind., is a member of the Crossroads League and an NIAA athletic institution. He is the son of Jessica and Kurt Cantlon.

Cantlon is a multi-sport athlete who is also a four-year member of both the Hamilton Heights Basketball and Cross Country teams. A strong student-athlete, he has earned numerous academic and athletic honors, including the Mental Attitude Award (Basketball), Top 10%, Summa Cum Laude, Hugh O'Brien Youth Leadership Graduate, A Chance to Serve Graduate, Four-Year Letter Award for Cross Country, College Board National Recognition, AP Scholar, and the English Departmental Award (Q3).

Cantlon said he chose Grace because it "felt like home as soon as I stepped on campus." Coach Gallion and the entire team made me feel incredibly welcome," said Cantlon, who plans to study Social Studies Education.

Cantlon has been a jumper since the seventh grade and has worked with many coaches at Hamilton Heights over the years to refine his technique, strength, and agility. He credits his family and Coach Dontavious Hill as having the greatest impact on his development both on and off the field.

Beyond athletics, Cantlon is deeply involved in his school and community. He serves as a student board member on the Hamilton Heights Educational Foundation, is a member of the National Honor Society, and participates in the Arcadia Christian Church Youth Group.

"It has been a pleasure to work with Jackson these past three years," said Ryan Woolever, Hamilton Heights Track & Field Jumps Coach. "He is a hard worker, the internal optimist, and never gets down on himself or the situation even if he didn't have the performance he was hoping for. He is also the definition of a team player when it comes to rooting for others success and will be a great teammate next year."

Jackson is a couple small tweaks away from doing big things when it comes to high jump next year at Grace College. I wish him the best of luck and "high jumps" for the next 4 years."

Kurt Ogden, Hamilton Heights Athletic Director, added, "Jackson has been a pleasure to have in the athletic program(s) at Hamilton Heights the past four years. He's a very humble and polite young man and has been a tremendous role model for all other athletes, both on and off the court. As a three-sport athlete, he's everything you want and more...a great teammate respected by everyone. We wish him well as he continues his Track & Field career at Grace College."

Westfield Middle School Band Soars

The Westfield Middle School band program has earned the Indiana State School Music Association All Music Award for the third consecutive year.

To qualify for the All Music Award, the band must have received gold ratings in a solo and ensemble contest, a jazz organizational contest, and a concert organizational contest.

This recognition represents a sustained commitment to high levels of learning, growth, and collaboration as students develop both as musicians and as Life Ready individuals.

To earn the ISSMA All Music Award, programs must meet rigorous criteria across multiple performance areas. WMS students consistently demonstrate excellence through solo and ensemble performances, jazz band competitions, and concert band events, earning top ratings while performing at advanced levels.

"We ask our students to be musicians," said Sarah Rivers, WMS Band Director. "They're not just looking at the markings and playing notes. They're understanding the flow of music. They're growing their understanding and improving sight reading"

Building Skills That Go Beyond the Classroom

For WMS students, band isn't just an elective or box to check off to graduate. It's an experience that builds skills aligned to life beyond school.

Students develop discipline, critical thinking, collaboration, and confidence as they prepare for performances and navigate increasingly complex music.

Eighth grade clarinetist Timothy Ellis shared how band has been a consistent source of support and direction.

"I really love the community, you know, the teachers, the family. Going in there every day, getting to play my instrument, but also getting to socialize and get to know other people like me is just an amazing experience I couldn't replace with anything," said Ellis.

That sense of belonging is echoed across the program. Students consistently describe WMS band as a space where they build relationships while working toward shared goals.

"I love the environment when you walk into the classroom. It's a lot of fun, and it's always so satisfying when we get to play through a piece and it all comes together perfectly," said eighth grade trombone player Sophie Ball.

High Standards with Strong Support

Through individualized guidance and various opportunities via different styles (e.g. jazz, concert), students are encouraged to pursue their interests and challenge themselves.

Eighth grade French horn player Luke Miller credits the program's support system for helping him reach new levels as a musician.

"My teachers were able to put me in connection with great people who helped me get better at my instrument, and they pushed me and encouraged me. I got to go to All-State with a solo because of their help and their encouragement," said eighth grade French horn player Luke Miller who received a gold rating at State Solo and Ensemble.

WMS band directors

also emphasize providing access to a wide range of experiences, from beginner-level development to advanced performance opportunities.

The addition and growth of the jazz band program over the past several years has played a key role in the program's continued success, allowing students to expand their musical experiences and meet ISSMA's comprehensive criteria.

"We've been able to build a well-rounded program that gives students multiple ways to grow," said James Howard, WMS Band Director. "This recognition is a reflection of the effort students put in every day. It's nice for the kids to be able to see this award and say 'My hard work has been manifested in this.'"

Preparing Students to Be Life Ready

At its core, the WMS band program reflects WWS's commitment to preparing students to be Life Ready. It focuses on helping students develop confidence, resilience, and the ability to contribute as part of a team in addition to the expected artistic and academic growth.

"The All Music award shows us how far we've come and shows how much work all of us kids put into it. And I think it's really nice to be recognized for that," said eighth grade saxophonist Abigail Graham.

As the program celebrates its third consecutive ISSMA All Music Award, the focus remains on what matters most: continuing to challenge and support students as they grow into capable, confident individuals prepared for wherever they decide to invest their talents.
